THIS HUMBLE ATTEMPT AT EMULATING HIM.

A WORK on the literary impositions which have been perpetrated upon the public, besides being replete with interest, would be productive of considerable other advantage. It would furnish an important subject of study in the great science of human nature, exhibiting peculiar, cultivated specimens of criminality.

THE secret history of the authorship of literary productions would strip many a name of the reputation it enjoys, and place laurels on the brow of many a man who

- In life's low vale remote has pined alone,
Then dropped into the grave, unpitied and unknown !

Rank and wealth have obtained unmerited eminence in the literary world, at the expense of the time and abilities of gifted dependents.

DAVID FOSDICK, Biblical Repository, New York, 1838.

^{MC}LITERARY swindling is a crime that is very prevalent, because we have no Government police to bring offenders to justice.

P R E F A C E.

This little work is the first of the kind, so far as we know, that has ever been attempted in the English language ; and such being the case, we crave the indulgence of the public for our numerous shortcomings. In publishing it we felt the necessity of commencing somewhere. We might, without doubt, have spent twenty years in a similar compilation ; but even then it would not have been perfect:—in fact, it is not in the nature of a book like this to be made perfect. It can, however, approach completeness by the aid of numerous contributors. If, for example, each one who found a name wanting, were to send an authentic note of it to us, an immense amount of information would soon accumulate, which we would undertake to embody in a supplement devoted to additions and corrections, if the present attempt should receive sufficient support. By this means we trust we shall help to fill up the gap which is at present a reproach to our nation.

The utility of a work of this kind, even though very imperfect, is at once so apparent that it is a matter of considerable surprise such a blank should have been left in our literature.

Another work of a similar nature, but larger and different in scope to ours, which Mr. Halkett, of the Advocates' Library, has been preparing for some fifteen years past will be a considerable addition to British Anonyms and Pseudonyms. On the Continent numerous works treating of the subject of assumed names of authors have been published, and in fact the idea of nearly every English work that treats of books and their authors appears to have been taken from our foreign brothers in literature. We are indebted to Quérard for the idea and plan of this work. In the advertisement to the second edition of his "Supercheries Littéraires Dévoilées," he observes that Germany first produced a work on anonymous and pseudonymous authors; then Italy; then France, for the first time, in 1690, by Adrien Baillet. Then Sweden, and lately Belgium, and even Russia. Now we wish to direct attention to the remarkable fact that Quérard was unable to name a single English author as having treated of the subject, though in France it was treated of two centuries ago.

Our original intention was that this should be a handbook for popular use; consequently, as a rule, we pretend to no scientific detail. Those who desire such must seek it elsewhere; and yet we hope the erudite bibliograph, though he may learn nothing from these pages, will find much wherewith to refresh his memory. One object we have endeavoured never to lose sight of, — usefulness.

With us the word Pseudonym has a very extended signification, as these pages will show. Any word, or name, or phrase, on a title-page is sufficient to make a work pseudonymous. It is not considered anonymous unless its title-page is hopelessly deficient of all personal identification of authorship.

We do not, for example, consider a work "By The Author of," &c., anonymous, as do Lowndes and his editor. This example is also a good illustration of the labour we have had to go through, and it will show that our handbook, is by no means a compilation from existing manuals, for the simple reason that these nearly always leave out the very information it is our object to include. In Lowndes, by Bohn, under "SHERER (Major Moyle)," we have seven out of a list of nine works specially marked "(anon)." Now, according to us, three of these works, at least, are strictly pseudonymous, and consequently included in our list. We could cite other instances from any bibliotheca.

We have made an attempt to distinguish the various kinds of pseudonyms by using certain technical terms in italic letters after each pseudonym. A list of these terms will be found in our "Notice of the Life and Works of J.-M. Quérard." The author of an "Essai d'un Dictionnaire des Ouvrages Anonymes et Pseudonymes publiés en Belgique au XIX^e. siècle" [J. Delecourt] somewhat deprecates such an attempt as useless. But we consider that, even supposing such to be the case in one sense, it is exceedingly useful to the eye, by at once separating the pseudonym from the real name; and it has a positive use in certain cases, as, for instance, when a writer uses his name written backwards, which, instead of being expressed by a phrase, is at once expressed by a word.

The arrangement is strictly alphabetical according to Authors' pseudonyms. When partaking of the nature of a christian and a surname, the latter is chosen, though both should be looked for if not found under one. If, in the nature of a phrase, the first word after By, Of, or From is chosen, and it is catalogued strictly according to the alphabetical order of the letters, without regard to the meaning of the words, no inversion such as: Barrister (A): Author of, &c. (The): is used.

So much as is given of the title-page is given verbally and literally, and an abbreviation is generally indicated by . . . or an etc. Information occurring between brackets [] intimates that such is not to be found in the book; between parenthesis () that it is probably in the book, though not on the title-page. An asterisk occurring before a Title shows that the work was published anonymously. When initials only are used, search must be made under the first and not the last, unless there is some addition to the last, as: J. R. D——.

The name of every author, if known, is given in full in one part or another of the book.

We have not confined ourselves to English and American pseudonyms: in fact, our plan is rather a wide one, for we include Alexander DUMAS and George SAND: BOZ, illustrated by PHIZ: S. G. O.: THE TIMES' BEE-MASTER: CHAM and * * * (The Abbé).

We could have doubled the size of this work by inserting the pseudonyms of authors whose real names are not known to us. This is, however, no part of our plan, and when such are inserted it is generally for some special purpose.

When no place of publication is given, London is to be understood, and an author is generally of that country whence his works issue. So many American authors, however, now have their works published in London, that it is frequently a difficult matter to know on which side of the Atlantic the author resides.

We have to acknowledge the very great assistance we have derived from the admirable Manuscript Catalogue of the British Museum Library, in above two thousand volumes, folio, compiled during the last twenty years, under the direction of Antonio Panizzi, J. Winter Jones, and Thomas Watts, Esquires. To George Bullen, Esquire, and all those who attend to readers' wants, we owe our best thanks. After these, we think we are most indebted to the Athenæum, whose fearless exposure of any literary fraud coming under its notice has justly been relentless. But the want of a General Index has prevented us from thoroughly using the materials it contains relative to our subject. To Notes and Queries we of course owe much, as must all future students, no matter what particular subject they pursue. And to several periodical publications, all specially acknowledged..

Mr. J. Russell Smith has given us the full benefit of his long experience in our progress through the press. To many others, frequently the authors themselves, we are indebted for some interesting little revelations. Much has long been public property, though unavailable. We trust that we have, to some extent, rendered it available.

American works are so freely scattered through these pages, that we cannot conclude without one word on the want of a Copyright Law between America and England. How long will two nations with pretensions to civilization go on robbing one another in the most shameless manner? An excellent article on this subject by James Parton, in the Atlantic Monthly for October, 1867, has convinced us that in some instances we have been rather too severe on American piratical reprints.

PSEUDONYMS.

A., initialism. [MATTHEW ARNOLD.]

The Strayed Reveller, and other Poems (signed A.) 1848.

A. (Major), see A * * * * * (Major), pseud.

A———. pseudonym [REV. ARTHUR CLEVELAND COXE.]

St. Jonathan; the Lay of a Scald. New York, 1838.

Semi-anonymous, the dedication is signed.

A * * * * * (Major), pseudo titlonym [C. B. COLES.]

Short Whist, its Rise and Progress, by, &c., to which are prefixed Precepts for Tyros, by Mrs. B * * * * * (Battle, apocryph), 1835, 18th edit., with an Essay by Professor P[ole]. Longmans, 1865.

The practical part of this book, consisting of about 25 pages, which it was intended should be taken for the work of Major Aubrey, a celebrated whist player, is a réchauffé of Matthews: one instance will suffice:—

Matthews, edit. 1808.

Be particularly cautious not to deceive him [your partner] in his or your own leads, or when he is likely to have the lead—a concealed game may now and then succeed in the suits of your adversaries; but this should not be attempted before you have made a considerable proficiency; and then but seldom, as its frequency would destroy the effect. p. 16.

Major A., edit. 1865.

Be cautious not to deceive your partner in his or your own leads, or when he is likely to have the lead; a concealed game sometimes succeeds in the suits of your adversaries, but this should not be attempted before having made considerable proficiency, and if too frequently resorted to, will destroy its own effect. p. 30.

In an edition published in Paris by Galignani, these two works, Matthews and Major A. are put together.

Mrs. Battle's opinions on Whist are also to be found in the Monthly Magazine for Feb. 1821, signed "Elia." (q.v.)

A and L, semi-initialism [A. and L. SHORE].
War Lyrics, 1855.

A BARRISTER, titlonym [BARRON FIELD].
Hints to witnesses in a Court of Justice, 1815.

A very valuable and useful pamphlet, which we imagine might be remuneratively reprinted.

A BARRISTER, titlonym [SIR J. T. COLERIDGE].
Notes on the Reform Bill, 1831.

A BARRISTER, titlonym [FREDERICK LAWRENCE].
Culverwell v. Sidebottom. Effingham Wilson, 1857.

This had a second edition in 1859, to which Lord Derby's celebrated letter to the Jockey Club was added. It was a most notorious trial.

A BARRISTER, supposed-author [JAMES FITZ-JAMES STEPHEN, Q.C.].

Essays reprinted from the "Saturday Review," 1862.

A BEEF EATER, phraseonym [GEORGE VASEY, Wood-Engraver, author of a Monograph of the Genus Bos].

Illustrations of Eating, displaying the Omnivorous Character of Man, and exhibiting the Natives of various Countries at Feeding-time, with woodcuts by the author. J. R. Smith, 1847.

A BIRD AT BROMSGROVE, ironym [JOHN CRANE].

Rhymes after Meat, 1800. An Address to Bachelors, and The Apron Farmer. Birmingham [1802], 5th edition, 1816. The Bromesgrove Constables, 1802.

A. B. M., initialism [ARTHUR BACHE MATTHEWS].

The Riots at Birmingham, July, 1791. . . . [edited with a preface by A. B. M.], 1863.

A BRITISH SUBJECT, geonym [SIR FRANCIS BOND HEAD Bart.].

Three Letters to Lord Brougham, on the execution of Lount and Matthews, 1838.

A. C. C, initialism [COXE], and see A———. pseud.

Saul, a Mystery, by the Author of Christian Ballads, &c. New York, 1845.

ACHETA, phrenonym [MISS L. M. BUDGEN].

March Winds and April Showers, 1854.

ACHETA DOMESTICA, phreno. [MISS L. M. BUDGEN].

Episodes of Insect Life, by A. D., M.E.S., 1849 and '51, a new edition by the Rev. J. G. Wood, in 1867.

A CHINESE PHILOSOPHER, disguised-author [OLIVER GOLDSMITH].

The Citizen of the World; or Letters from a Chinese Philosopher residing in London, to his Friends in the East, 1762. First appeared in "The Ledger."

Frequently reprinted and generally with the author's name on the title-page, as if it had been published autonymously. All lovers of books should condemn this increasing practice. If the name must be given, it should be put in a note or preface, so that we may have the title-page as the author bequeathed it.

A CHURCHMAN, titlonym [REV. EDWARD SMEDLEY, M.A., was the editor of the Encyclopædia Metropolitana].

Religio Clerici, 1819; 2nd edition, 1821. Lux Renata; a Protestant's Epistle, by the author of Religio Clerici, 1827.

A CITIZEN, see J. D., disg. aut.

A CITIZEN OF THE WEST, disguised-author [R. MACKAY].

Pocahontas, an historical drama; with an introductory Essay and notes. By, &c. New York, 1837.

A CLERGYMAN OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, demonym [M. MARGOLIOUTH].

The Anglo-Hebrews: their past wrongs and present grievances, etc., 1856.

A CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER, demonym [E. F. LLOYD]; see also E. F. L.

Readings for the Sundays, etc., 1862.

A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE, demonym [S. E. MAPLETON]

A Letter to my Class. Addressed to Young Women attending a Sunday School. Leeds, 1859.

A COMPANION TRAVELLER, phrenonym [Miss HARRIS, of Windsor].

From Oxford to Rome; and How it fared with some who lately made the journey. 1st and 3rd editions, 1847.

The authoress subsequently became a Catholic, and publicly expressed her deep regret for many of the unauthorised statements, or false impressions concerning the Church of Rome in the above work.

F. C. H. in N. & Q.

A CORNET IN THE HON. EAST INDIA COMPANY'S SERVICE, titlonym [the Eldest Son of T. J. PETTIGREW. He was a Lieutenant in the Madras Light Cavalry, and died in 1837, at the early age of 24].

Lucien Greville. By a, etc., with Etchings by George Cruikshank. Saunders and Otley, 1833, 3 vols.

"It gives the events of his short life, and it has served him for a vehicle to give an account of Indian scenery and Indian manners and customs."

A CORONER'S CLERK, ps [REV. ERSKINE NEALE].

The Note-book of a, etc., reprinted from "Bentley's Miscellany."

A COUNTRY PARSON, disguised-author [H. MOULE].

My Kitchen Garden, and half an acre of Pasture. '60.

A COUNTRY PARSON, disg.-aut. [A. K. H. BOYD].

Autumn Holidays, 1864.

A COUNTRY PASTOR, demonym [Archbishop WHATELY].

Lectures on Scripture Revelations, 1855. Prayer, 1860. And others.

A DELVER INTO ANTIQUITY, phraseonym [WILLIAM BARCLAY DAVID DONALD TURNBULL].

Fragmenta Scoto-Monastica. Edin., 1842.

Only 70 copies printed, one L.P., one on vellum.

A DETECTIVE, phrenonym [ANDREW EDMUND BRAE, of Leeds, author of Collier, Coleridge, and Shakespeare, A Review, etc].

Literary Cookery, with reference to matter attributed [by J. P. Collier] to Coleridge and Shakespeare. A letter addressed to "The Athenæum" [by a Detective], with a P.S. containing some remarks upon the refusal of that journal to print it. J. R. Smith, 1855.

As this publication gave great offence to many persons, it was immediately withdrawn by its author, who was unknown for some time after. No more than twenty-five copies got into circulation, some of which fetched ten shillings.

On the 17th Jany., 1856, Sir F. Thesiger, on behalf of Mr. Collier, moved for a rule against Mr. Russell Smith for publishing it; but Lord Campbell said that Mr. Collier in an affidavit which he had made, had cleared himself of the alleged "cooking" of dates in a most satisfactory manner, and, with many just compliments to the veteran bibliograph and bibliophile, refused the rule.

A. E. L., initialism [LEE].

The Fruits of the Valley (Song of Solomon), 1855.

A FISHER IN SMALL STREAMS, disguised-author [WILLIAM LINN BROWN, an American].

Scribblings and Sketches, Diplomatic, Piscatory, and Oceanic. Phil, 1844. J. R. S.

A FRIEND OF THE FAMILY, pseudonym [WILLIAM AYRTON].

The Adventures of a Salmon in the River Dee, etc. Pickering, 1853.

AGAPIDA (Antonio) Friar, apocryph [WASHINGTON IRVING].

A Chronicle of the Conquest of Granada. From the MSS. of, etc., 2 vols, 1829. Later editions.

A GENTLEMAN WHO HAS LEFT HIS LODGINGS, pseudonym [JOHN EARL RUSSELL].

Essays and Sketches of Life and Character. By, etc. Longman, 1820.

The preface is signed "Joseph Skillet," the lodging-house keeper, who is supposed to publish these letters to pay the rent the gentleman had forgotten. This preface is left out in the 2nd edition, which is dedicated to Thomas Moore.

A GENTLEMAN RESIDENT IN THE NEIGHBOURHOOD, who has made the Amusement his Study for upwards of Twenty Years, phraseonym [CHARLES SNART, an Attorney of Newark].

Practical Observations on Angling in the River Trent, Newark, 1801. Lond. 1812. J. R. S.

A GAOL CHAPLAIN, demonym [Rev. ERSKINE NEALE].

Recollections of a, etc. Reprinted from "Bentley's Miscellany."

A GLOWWORM, pseud. (JOHN LORAIN BALDWIN, editor of the Laws of Short Whist as framed by the Whist Committee of the Arlington Club].

A Glimpse at Whist, published at the Glowworm Office, [1866] on a card.

This is a plagiarism of the Pocket Guide to Whist by Cavendish.

See the Field, 6 Oct., 1866.

A GRADUATE OF OXFORD, tit. [JOHN RUSKIN].

Modern Painters, their superiority in the Art of Landscape painting proved by examples, &c. 1844.

Several editions. The author's name occurs on the title-page of vol 3, in the edition of 1846.

A GRANDFATHER, demonym [SERGIUS ST. JOHN].

First Impressions, or Tales of, etc.

A HARROW TUTOR, demonym [CECIL FREDERICK HOLMES].

A HAÖLE, geonym [A. LIHOLIHO].
Sandwich Island Notes, 1854.

A. H. G., initialism [GRANT].

Contributions to "London Society," chiefly poetical.

This gentleman is also author of a pseudonymous two volume work, which we are not at present at liberty to give the title of.

A. J. K., initialism [KEMP].

A few words to Tradesmen, 1842.

A JUSTIFIED SINNER, apocryph [JAMES HOGG, the Ettrick Shepherd].

The Private Memoirs of ———, written by himself, with a detail of curious traditional facts, and other evidence, by the editor [J. H.], 1824.

A HERTFORDSHIRE INCUMBENT, geo-demonym [the Rev. Canon J. W. BLAKESLEY, Vicar of Ware].

Contemporary Memoirs of Russia, 1727-44. By General Manstein, edited by Hume, and re-edited by, etc. 1856.

Also author of numerous letters in The Times, under this signature during the Crimean War.

A. K. H. B., init. [ANDREW KENNEDY HUTCHINSON BOYD].
The Critical Essays of a Country Parson, 1865.

A LADY demonym [MRS. RUNDALL].

A New System of Domestic Cookery. Several editions, from 1808 to 1859.

The most popular work of its kind ever printed.

A LADY, demonym [MRS. ANNA JAMESON].

The Diary of an Ennuyée, 1826. Several editions since.

Accident caused this work to be published, and we may also say that accident made the authoress. A gentleman who knew her and her husband well, was looking over some of her papers, and found this Diary; he was so pleased with it that he offered to publish it, which he did; but about that time (1825) abandoning the bookselling for the Bar, where he afterwards took rank, he transferred the work to Mr. Colburn, who put a fresh title-page, altering it from A Lady's Diary to that which it at present bears. The running title of the 1st edition is A Lady's Diary. It was pretended that it was published "exactly as it was found on the death of the author."

"The chief portion of Mrs. Jameson's volumes [Visits and Sketehes at Home and Abroad, 1833] is, however, only a reprint of the Diary of, etc.—a delightful book, with an affected title, which has, it is hard to say why, only attained the honours of a second edition, in this almost surreptitious and certainly not very flattering re-appearance."—Edinb. Review, 1835.

A LADY, demonym [Miss GUNN, of Christchurch].

Conversations on Church Polity. Westley, 1833.

See N. & Q 3rd S x. 38.

A LADY, demonym [Mrs. PALMER, a Sister of Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS].

A Dialogue in the Devonshire Dialect, 1837.

J R. Smith. Bib List. Dialects

A LADY, demonym [Miss SUSAN FENIMORE COOPER, daughter of the celebrated American novelist, has added to the family laurels, and thereby proved that no salique law exists in the Republic of Letters. Allibone.]

Rural Hours, 4 edit. New York, 1854.

A LADY, demonym [JULIA WARD, afterwards HOWE].

Passion Flowers, Poems. Boston, 1854.

A LADY, demonym [Miss E. M. SEWELL].

Amy Herbert, by a Lady, edited by Rev. W. Sewell. Longman, 1865.

Perhaps the ladies will take compassion on a poor bibliophile, when we state that he has upwards of fifty works in his list, whose authors are unknown, all "By a Lady."

A LADY OF NEW YORK, phreno-dem. [Mrs. S. HAIGHT].

Letters from the Old World. New York, 1840.

ALASTOR, pseud. [JAMES ORTON].

“Excelsior,” or the Realms of Poesie, 2 edition. Pickering, 1852 ; Poems, 1857 ; Caleb Redivivus, 1858.

A LATE LEARNED AND REVEREND DIVINE,
phraseonym [SAMUEL PEGGE, LL.D.]

Anonymiana, or Ten Centuries of Observations on various subjects, Compiled by —. 1809.

A LATE NOBLE WRITER, impostor [RT. HONBLE EDMUND BURKE, q. v.]

It was intended that the above should be supposed to be Henry St. John Viscount Bolingbroke.

A LAYMAN, demonym [JAMES ALLAN PARK, a King's Counsel, and Benchèr of Lincoln's Inn.]

An earnest exhortation to a frequent Reception of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, 1804.

A LAYMAN, demonym [SIR JOHN BAYLEY, Bart].

Prophecies of Christ, etc., selected from the Old and New Testament, 1828.

A LAYMAN, demonym [SIR WALTER SCOTT].

Religious Discourses, 1828.

A LAYMAN, demonym [RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, BARON HOUGHTON].

One Tract more, etc., 1841.

A LAYMAN, demonym [FREDERICK JOHN, Fifth BARON MONSON].

Four Sermons. Lond.-1842. Priv. Print., see Martin.

A LAYMAN, dem. [F. BOLINGBROKE RIBBANS, F.S.A.]

Doctrines and Duties ; Faith and Practice. Whittaker, 1843.

A LAYMAN, demonym [SIR W. DOMVILLE, BART.]

The Sabbath, etc., 1849.

A LAYMAN, demonym [SIR EDWARD HALL ALDERSON].

A second letter [in reference to the Gorham Case].
(Privately printed), 1851.

A LAYMAN, demonym [SAMUEL AUSTIN ALLIBONE, Author of a Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors, 1859, a work to which we are much indebted].

A review by a Layman of a work entitled "New Themes for the Protestant Clergy: Creeds without Charity, Theology without Humanity, and Protestantism without Christianity" (by S. Colwell). Phil., 1852.

ALETHINOS, phrenonym [REV. HARDINGE FURENZO IVERS].

The Audibleness of Thought demonstrated, and its use explained. 2nd edit., 1866.

The author of this most extraordinary pamphlet contends that the organs of speech are called into action when we think, that thought speaks in the head, otherwise there is no thought; and he also contends that this inaudible thought is capable of being audible to others.

ALICE (Cousin), prenonym [ALICE B. NEALE].

Helen Morton's Trial, juvenile tale. New York, 1852.

A LINCOLNSHIRE GRAZIER, pseudo-titlonym [REV. THOMAS HARTWELL HORNE].

The circumstances under which this pseudonym was employed, if they were not rather distressing, would be highly amusing. The reverend gentleman, who afterwards raised his name to such a high position in literature, was in 1805 in great distress, and glad to work for the booksellers. Having obtained an introduction to Crosby, the publisher, upon the hard condition that he would give half his earnings to his introducer, Horne was offered £50 for a work of 400 pages (!) on the Management of Grazing Farms, to be called "The Complete Grazier." The bargain was struck, and in nine months our barrister's clerk reduced the mass of materials set before him by the publisher, and they were ushered into the world as by "A Lincolnshire Grazier," and the book was pushed through several editions. The poor booksellers's hack was in want, but what excuse is there for Crosby, the then opulent publisher, of Paternoster Row, for his share of this imposition?

A LITERARY ANTIQUARY, phreno-demonym [F. W. FAIRHOLT, F.S.A., author of Costume in England,].

Holbein's Dance of Death, edited by, etc. J. R. Smith.

A. L. O. E., enigmatic-initialism (A Lady of England) [Miss CHARLOTTE TUCKER].

This Aloe is not at all in keeping with her cognomen, for she has produced upwards of fifty pieces, or volumes, since 1854, under the above initials, and we commend them to the reader as of exceeding beauty.

A LONDON ANTIQUARY, pseud. [JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN].

A Dictionary of Modern Slang, Cant, and Vulgar Words, etc. 1859 and 1860.

The third and subsequent editions are anonymous.

A LONDON PHYSICIAN, supposed-author [JAMES HOWARD].

The Evils of England, Social and Economical. Parker, 1848, 12mo.

A LOVER OF LITERATURE, phraseonym [THOMAS GREEN, Barrister-at-Law, of Ipswich].

In this "Diary of a Lover of Literature," on June 2nd, 1797, we have:—"Visited the Royal Exhibition. Particularly struck with a sea-view by Turner; fishing vessels coming in, with a heavy swell, in apprehension of a tempest gathering in the distance . . . The whole composition bold in design, and masterly in execution. I am entirely unacquainted with the artist; but if he proceeds as he has begun, he cannot fail to become the first in his department." J. M. W. Turner was then twenty-five. The continuation was contributed by Mr. Green's son to the Gent. Mag., 1834. W. Bates, N. & Q.

ALVAREZ ESPRIELLA (Manuel) Spanish-pseudonym [ROBERT SOUTHEY, Poet Laureate].

Letters from England, translated from the Spanish, in 3 vols, 1807.

Written by Southey: not translated.

A. M., pseudonym [THADDEUS O'MAHONY].

Questions on Locke's Essay concerning Human Understanding, by A. M., 1860.

He also signs himself T. O'M.

A MANCHESTER MAN, tilonym [REV. J. LAMB].

Free Thoughts of a, 2 vols, 1866, from "Fraser's Magazine.

A MANCHESTER MANUFACTURER, geo-demonym [RICHARD COBDEN].

England, Ireland, and America. 1836. Russia. Edinburgh, 1836.

A MAN OF BUSINESS, pseudonym [T. DICKER, of Lewes].

The Christian Life exemplified in the Memorials and Remains of, etc. Hatchard, 1852. Privately printed. Has a portrait of the author signed.

A MAN OF BUSINESS, phren. [WILLIAM RATHBONE].

Social Duties considered with reference to the Organisation of Effort in Works of Benevolence and Public Utility. Macmillan, 1867.

AMELIA, ps. [MRS. WELBY, of Louisville, Kentucky].

Poems. New York, 1842.

A MEMBER OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH, phraseonym [SIR JOHN BAYLEY, Bart].

The Book of Common Prayer, with Notes. 1813. A second edit., with the author's name, was published in '16; the notes are very useful. "The author withheld his name, not from any wish improperly to conceal it, but because it was no part of his object to draw himself into notice."

A MEMBER OF THE VERMONT BAR, disguised-author [DANIEL P. THOMPSON].

AN IRISHWOMAN, geonym [Miss ANNA PERRIER].

The Irishman. S. O. Beeton, 1866.

Republished from "The Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine," in which it appeared as, The Irishman in Reality and Romance. This fact is not stated in the reprint.

In a review of "a Walking Tour Round Ireland by an Englishman" in The Times for the 9th Oct., 1867, the above work was mentioned as an authority for some points. The following day the authoress wrote complaining that the passages from her work ought to have been in inverted commas! The editor justly remarked that she seemed "the most unreasonable woman in the world."

The Illustrations are by the author.

We may also notice from the pen of this gentleman, the libretto of “Bride of Kynast, a Grand Romantic Opera in three acts. Lond., printed by J. Miles & Co., 1864.” Only a few copies were printed at the expense of the late Alfred Mellon, who intended to compose the Music to it. He abandoned it because the author would not part with his copyright for less than fifty pounds above the one hundred Mellon offered him. It is one of the best librettos we have read.

BELL (Acton) pseud. [ANNE BRONTE].

The Tenant of Wildfell Hall. 2 edit., 1848.

BELL (Currer) (Ellis) and (Acton) polynym [CHARLOTTE, EMILY JANE, and ANNE BRONTË].

Poems by C. E. and A. Bell, 1846.

The "Athenæum" thought these were by three brothers. They were always in fact taken for men, and in letters used the masculine gender. Charlotte Brontë gives the following account of the assumption of these pseudonyms:

"Averse to publicity, we veiled our own names under those of Currer, Ellis, and Acton Bell; the ambiguous choice being dictated by a sort of conscientious scruple of assuming Christian names positively masculine, while we did not declare ourselves women, because—without at the time suspecting that our mode of writing and thinking was not what is called 'feminine,'—we had a vague impression that authoresses are liable to be looked on with prejudice."—Mrs. Gaskell's Life of Brontë, 1858, p. 240.

Having written a letter in the masculine gender to Miss Martineau, the latter, in her reply, began "Dear Madam," but addressed it to "Currer Bell, Esq."

BELL (Currer) pseud. [CHARLOTTE BRONTË, afterwards NICHOLLS].

Reprinted in Lowndes by Bohn, 1861.

BENSON (Carl) pseud. [CHARLES ASTOR BRISTED, grandson of the founder of the Astor Library].

BENSON (Edgeworth) pseud. [JOHN SCOTT, author of a Visit to Paris, etc.]

Articles in the London Magazine, of which he was editor.

John Scott's career was cut short at the age of 37. In a literary quarrel Mr. Scott considered himself injured or insulted, and challenged Mr. Christie. They fought by moon-light at Chalk Farm, and Scott was shot dead! The survivors were tried for murder, but acquitted. See Gent. Mag., 1821. An apology, in the virulent language of the time, for Mr. Christie will be found in Blackwood's Magazine, xix.

BIGLOW (Hosea) apocryph [JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL].

The Bouquet culled from Marylebone Gardens by —, and arranged by Thistle [pseud.] [1851—55]. Printed for private circulation.

BOGUE (David) Publisher.

In 1846, Henry G. Bohn, the well known publisher, obtained an injunction against Bogue for pirating part of a work published by him entitled, "Illustrations of the Life of Lorenzo de Medici by William Roscoe." It appeared that William Hazlitt had "gutted" this work, rejecting what he had not quoted as worthless. Bogue was therefore restrained from publishing his work in "The European Library," entitled "A Life of Lorenzo de Medici." The case is one of great interest, and will be found in "The Jurist,"—vol. x.

BOSSUT (M. l'Abbé) Professor of Languages pseudotitlonym [Sir RICHARD PHILLIPS].

The first French Grammar.—A Key to French Conversation and Idiom.—The French Syntax, 1807.—3,000 Words.—2,000 Phrases.—Easy Exercises.

Another pseudonym we have to record against Sir Richard. He did it in a good cause—that of education—so perhaps it is not right to blame him as if he had used them in a less worthy cause.

"Bossut's Philological Works."

Early in the present century the Abbé Bossut developed that simple natural system of acquiring languages, which, with slight variations, has been seized on by Hamilton and others. It is exactly described in the Preface to his little French Grammar printed in 1805, and is the system by which every language is acquired in the nursery, etc., etc."

It was no doubt his intention that the Abbé Ch. Bossut, the celebrated Mathematician, who died in 1814, at Paris, should be taken for the above.

BOZ, pseud. [CHARLES DICKENS].

Sketches by Boz, illustrative of Every-day Life. 1836. 1837. Memoirs of Grimaldi. 1838. Oliver Twist and Nicholas Nickleby, in German, 1838—40. Frequently republished.

Intercepted Letters, or the Two-penny Post Bag. 8th edit., 1813. The Fudge Family in Paris. 8th edit., 1818. The Fudges in England, 1835. The latter was reviewed in The Edinburgh, 1836.

BRYANT (William Cullen).

A literary hoax was played off in the name of this celebrated American poet by the editor of the Buffalo Republic in order, as he alleged, to establish what we believe to have been fully established long since, viz., that no matter how atrocious an effusion might be, the name of a known poet appended to it, would render it true poetry in the eyes of a large majority of poetry readers. Having succeeded in deluding his readers, who, no doubt felt delighted with the amusing trick, it afterwards came out that the trashy verses were the editor's own. --Notes & Queries, 2 s., vii.

The King of the Sea, 1848. The G'hals of New York, 1850. Grassbeak Mansion, a Mystery of New York, 1864. Life in the Saddle, New York, 1866. And others.

BURKE (Edmund) imitator [Rt. Hon. EDMUND BURKE].

A Vindication of Natural Society . . . In a letter to Lord * * * * by a Late Noble Writer [impostor], 1756.

In this Burke imitated the style of "A late Noble Writer" so closely, that Mallett, his executor, went to Dodsley's, the publisher's shop, when full, and publicly disavowed it. Burke had also written in 1749, some pieces in imitation and ridicule of Dr. Charles Lucas. The "imitation" was so complete as to deceive the public.—Life, by Peter Burke.

Burke's "imitation," as it is mildly termed, of Lord Bolingbroke was a cheat and fraud on the public, and is so highly to be condemned, that any writer of the present day who attempted a deceit of this kind, would deserve the utmost censure.

BURNS (Robert), Poet.

Many readers will doubtless wonder why this name figures in our list. It is not a pseudonym! and surely Nature's Poet could not have been a plagiarist, or impostor! No. Burns was no impostor, but he was himself deceived by an imposture, and as is generally the case, for the sake of gain. We have it on the very excellent authority of Mr. William Chappell, that the result of the deception practised upon Burns and the Scottish public is, that whereas Burns intended to write only to Scotch tunes, literally one half of his songs, were written, and are still published to English or Irish airs—principally to English.

CHATTERTON (Thomas) literary forger.

When very young, his sister says, a manufacturer promised to make Mr Chatterton's children a present of some earthenware; on asking the boy what device he would have painted upon his—"Paint me (said Chatterton) an angel, with wings, and a trumpet, to trumpet my name over the world"—Life by Dr Gregory, 1803.

The Execution of Sir C. Bawdin [a poem]. By Thomas Rowley. 1772. 4to.

Poems supposed to have been written at Bristol, by Thomas Rowley [a monk], and others in the 15th Century; the greatest part now first published from the most authentic copies, with an engraved specimen of one of the MSS., to which are added a preface, an introductory account of the several pieces, and a glossary [edited by T. Tyrwhitt, with a frontispiece]. Lond. 1777. 8vo. Numerous editions.

For much of the following brief notice of the impostures of this unfortunate, mad genius, we are indebted to an article by our respected friend, Mr. Frederick Lawrence, who has kindly given us permission to make such use of his articles in Sharpe's London Magazine as suit our purpose.

"Chatterton's first forgery, although of the nature of an innocent hoax—a mere schoolboy's trick—is deserving of some little attention, as illustrating in a striking manner, not merely his profound skill in the art of deception, but his ready insight into human character, and quick perception of individual weakness and peculiarities. A pewterer of Bristol, named Burgum, had taken some notice of him, and whilst treating him as a mere boy, had encouraged a degree of intimacy which gave Chatterton an opportunity of practising on his credulity. He soon found that Burgum was a vain man, and just the person to be tickled and inflated with the pride of ancestry; so he set to work and deduced his pedigree from one of the companions of the Conqueror. From documents which he pretended to have discovered in the muniment room of the Church of St. Mary, Redcliffe, he compiled a history of the 'De Bergham' family; and furthermore produced a poem, entitled 'the Romaunt of the 'nyghte,' written by one John de Bergham, who flourished in the 14th century. As Chatterton had suspected, the worthy pewterer was too well pleased to permit himself to doubt the authenticity of the document which conferred on him such an amount of ancestral dignity; and thus auspiciously commenced the course of Fraud which ended in the production of Rowley."

Then came the forged account of the opening of an old bridge, sent to the printer of Farley's Bristol Journal, introduced by a letter, signed 'Dunhelmus Bristolienſis,' intimating that it was taken from an old MS.

This again went down, and the game went on merrily: it was followed by another. Chatterton was found out, and told a good round lie to account for his possession of the MSS.

His next fraud was perpetrated at the expense of a Mr. Catcott, who was then writing a history of Bristol, and for whose benefit Chatterton manufactured an account of Bristol, by Turgot or Turgotus, "translated by T. Rowley, out of Saxon into English."

Chatterton emboldened by success, next wrote to Horace Walpole, who, though at first deceived, soon discovered the cheat, and gave him kindly advice. "Too cautious and sensitive to become the dupe of a lawyer's apprentice, he now drew back, and wrote the young enthusiast an edifying homily on the danger and disgrace of forgeries, and urged him to stick to his business, and relinquish his poetical aspirations."

Horace Walpole had just before been made the instrument of introducing into the world the Macpherson forgeries. Chatterton, instead of following it, was indignant at the advice given—advice which certainly did not come from one who himself had acted on it; for, be it remembered, "The Castle of Otranto" was said in the preface to have been discovered "in the library of an ancient Catholic family in the north of England, and printed at Naples, in black letter, in the year 1529!"

"Chatterton took his revenge on Walpole, and expressed his resentment in some spirited lines, which have been published in a recent memoir. We select a few couplets as apropos to our remarks.

"Thou mayst call me cheat;

Say didst thou never practice such deceit?
Who wrote Otranto?—But I will not chide;
Scorn I'll repay with scorn, and pride with pride;
Still, Walpole, still thy prosy chapters write,
And twaddling letters to some fair indite;
Laud all above thee, fawn and cringe to those Who for thy fame were better friends than foes."

It is not our purpose to linger on Chatterton's ultimate unfortunate fate. That of literary forgers seems almost as sure and inevitable as those of a commoner order, and though not visited upon them physically by the law of the land, the punishment has hitherto been unerring, and even more severe.

For the controversy which these forgeries excited, we must refer our readers to the works mentioned in Lowndes by Bohn, and to the article in Allibone's Dictionary of English Literature.

CRUSOE (Robinson) fictitious name [DANIEL DEFOE].

The Life and surprising Adventures of Robinson Crusoe, of York, Mariner. Written by himself. 1st edition, 1719.

The most popular fiction in our language.

"It is remarkable that two of the most interesting tales that ever were written,—'Robinson Crusoe' and 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,'—are without that which forms the chief source of interest in most other tales—a love story.

"Robinson Crusoe" and "Gulliver," are two works which probably will remain as long as the English language. One of them has even introduced a new word into our language; for lilliputian is often used to denote something excessively minute. And it is remarkable that the authors of these works, Defoe and Dean Swift, who have never been surpassed—perhaps never equalled—in any age or country in their own peculiar art of giving to fiction the air of reality, were contemporaries, and held each other in the greatest contempt and abhorrence. Their designs were different. "Gulliver" was, of course, not expected to be believed, but affords part of its amusement from the striking contrast between the sober, matter-of-fact style of the narrative, and the monstrous extravagance of the matter; as where mention is made in his quiet way of the house in Redriff, which brought in a rent of £30 a year; and of the little daughter Betsy, who was sewing her sampler, and who afterwards married and had children.

"Robinson Crusoe," on the contrary was originally put forth as a true history (Defoe not being very scrupulous on that point) and long after, and probably even down to the present time, was by many considered as substantially true, and as being merely the history of Alexander Selkirk, on the Island of Juan Fernandez; only a little dressed up, and with a change of names. It is possible that Defoe may have heard that history, and that it may have suggested to him the idea of his tale; but if this be so, it is the very utmost that could be said; for the two histories are totally unlike, except that in each there is an island in the South Sea, with goats upon it. Alexander Selkirk had no tools, or stores, or arms, saved from a wreck; he had no implements, save a pocket knife; and used to capture the goats, on whose flesh he fed, by running them down. He never met with any savages, nor had any friendly intercourse with the Spaniards; and there were only two remarkable incidents that occurred during his sojourn on the island, neither of which is found in the history of Robinson Crusoe. One was, his being pursued by a party of Spaniards who had landed on the island, and from whom he fled for his life, well knowing that their design was to murder him, as was the practice of the Spaniards with all strangers found in those seas. He escaped by climbing into a tree with thick foliage, where he lay hidden like King Charles in the oak.

His other adventure was catching hold of a goat. . . . Now both these remarkable incidents being wanting in "Robinson Crusoe," it is plain that the notion above alluded to, of the one history being taken from the other, is altogether groundless.

One part of the art by which Defoe gives his tale the air of reality, consists in the frequently recording minute particulars and trifling occurrences which lead to no result. . . . Another apparent indication of reality is that such improbabilities as there are lie precisely in the opposite quarter from that in which we should expect to find them. A writer of fiction would have been likely (as we may see for instance, in some of the imitations of "Robinson Crusoe") to attribute to the hero more ingenuity and greater success than is accordant with the rules of probability. With Robinson Crusoe it is just the reverse. . . .

It would be a curious and not unprofitable task to draw up a criticism of Robinson Crusoe, showing that there are, in a tale which, beyond all others, has been the oftenest mistaken for a true history, such improbabilities as amount to complete disproof. Such a work would be a kind of companion and supplement to the "Historic doubts respecting Napoleon Bonaparte" [published anonymously by Archbishop Whately] . . . His culture of rice may be pronounced an absolute impossibility. He threw out, it seems, before the entrance of his habitation, among dust and husks, some unperceived grams of barley and rice, which grew and came to perfection, and enabled him thenceforward, to cultivate those crops. Now this is probable enough as far as regards the barley; but Defoe was probably ignorant that rice, when designed for human food, is divested of its husk by a process which destroys its power of germinating; so that to sow rice in the state in which it comes to market would be as vain as to sow pearl-barley. . . . When Friday is pursued by three savages, and they come to a creek, one of them turns back, as being unable to swim. . . . A Brazilian sea-coast savage, unable to swim, may be pronounced a total impossibility. . . . When Robinson Crusoe comes forward to rescue the Spaniards who are about to be slaughtered, he addresses one of them in Spanish. . . . Alexander Selkirk, after only three years, could scarcely express himself even in his own mother-tongue.

But the most wide-spread (if I may so speak) of the improbabilities; though the one the most likely to be overlooked by the generality of readers, is the character ascribed to savages. . . . if we examine attentively all the accounts that are given of savages by those who have had actual intercourse with them, we shall inevitably come to the conclusion that the representation of savages, as given by Defoe, involves a complete moral impossibility. - Miscellaneous Remains of Archbishop Whately, to which the reader is referred for the whole of this interesting discussion.

We greatly regret that want of space prevents our giving the whole of the Archbishop's essay, as we consider it conclusive.

I read with great interest your notice of Mr. Kendall's [MS.] "Verses." In the Poem called "Kiama" the following line occurs:

A white sail glimmers out at sea—a vessel walking in her sleep.

In the Athenæum for the 17th Nov., 1860, you noticed a small volume of mine, viz., "Poems, by Morgan de Pembroke," Bennett.

In your review of my book under that name, one of the verses favourably noticed contained two lines, which you printed thus:

A white sail glimmers on the deep —

A vessel walking in her sleep.

The similarity between my two lines and Mr. Kendall's one line is remarkable. I write this to forestall any accusation against me of plagiarism should I reproduce my poem in another form at some future time.—Yours, etc.

DUMAS (Alexandre Davy) calling himself Marquis de la Pailleterie.

L'homme de genie ne vole pas, il conquiert.

Alex Dumas

Aventures de John Davy. Paris, 1840. 4 vols.

This romance, borrowed from the “Revue Britannique,” is said to be superior to many productions of Dumas of the same kind. “John Davy” is an English sailor, having a close relationship to Captain Marryat’s of the same name. In a somewhat prosy letter of Michael Angelo Titmarsh [Thackeray] to the most noble Alexandre Dumas, Marquis Davy de la Pailleterie, in Fraser’s Magazine, for 1846, he directly accuses him of having adopted it from the English.

Les Trois Mousquetaires [written by Auguste Maquet]. Paris, 1844. 8 vol. Vingt ans après suite des Trois Mousquetaires [by the same]. Paris, 1845, 10 vol. Dix ans après, ou le Vicomte de Bragelone, deuxième suite des Trois Mousquetaires, 6 vols [by the same].

Dumas is said to have taken the idea of his almost interminable novels from Richardson. Twenty-four volumes ! When, however, the ample margin is reduced, the type decreased in size, and the blank paper extracted, these 24 vols are reduced to something like reasonable proportions.

As he acknowledged in his preface, Alexander Dumas, or rather, Aug. Maquet, made free use of the “Mémoires d’Artagnan,” capitaine-lieutenant des Mousquetaires, [written by Sandraz de Courtitz, 1702.] He also gives the title of a MS. he found:—Mémoires de M. le Comte de la Fère, etc.—from which he had also drawn much matter. This latter announcement induced a learned French bibliograph to mention “the Three Musqueteers” as a reprint of an old MS. The first-mentioned work exists, but the MS. is a creation of the fertile novelist.

The great and deserved success of this romance, though in point of morals it is not as unexceptionable as Monte Christo, drew attention to an historical personage who had been totally neglected, viz. Charles de Batz de Castelmore, known by the title of the “comte d’Artagnan.”

Le Comte de Monte Christo. 1844—5. 18 vols.

The first part, the Chateau d’If, published separately, is written by P. A. Fiorentino. Monte Christo, which is a sequel to it, is written by Aug. Maquet. Two episodes are said to be literally taken from Memoires, etc., de la Police de Paris, by J. Peuchet, 1837—8. They are “Francois Picaud, histoire contemporaine,” and “Madame de Vartelle, ou un crime de famille.” The only alteration in the last being in the title and names. “La Roue de fortune,” of Auguste Arnould was made to contribute the completion of the history of “M. Morel.” And there are probably other “conquests” of the same nature undiscovered. Many pages are said to have been taken from the German.

Our readers are doubtless aware that this most successful and interesting piece of manufacture, was dramatised by the author, and occupied two nights in representation.

Innumerable are the tales of Dumas’ method of allotting and selling his manufactures. He himself explains one: “Mr. Véron came to me and said, ‘We are lost if we do not give in a week from this, an amusing, brilliant, and sensational romance. . . . You want a volume, that is 6,000 lines; 6,000 lines are 135 pages of my writing. Take this paper, number, and divide into paragraphs 135 pages. . . .’”

We have contented ourselves with the dates when these works were first published. They have been reprinted in every imaginable form; and three different translations sometimes published in the same language at one time.

The number of authors who claim or are said to have written for Dumas is upwards of seventy. August Maquet alone furnished him with twenty-four volumes the Chevalier d’Harmental, Sylvandre, the Guerre des Femmes, the Reine Margot, Chevalier de Maison-Rouge, Memoires d’un Médecin, those mentioned above, and others.

The new editions of Monte Christo, Twenty Years After, etc., have the joint names of Dumas and Maquet on the title-page.

In 1845 he published sixty volumes, whereupon de Mircourt (see Dumas Père, 1867) makes this calculation:

The most skilful copyist, writing 12 hours a day, can with difficulty do 3,900 letters in an hour, which gives him at the end of a day 46,800 letters, or 60 pages of a romance. Thus he could copy five volumes octavo a month, and sixty a year, supposing that he does not lose a second during the time.

For the facts above we are indebted to Quérard and De Mircourt. Some interesting notes on Dumas will be found in our “notice of the life and works of Quérard, 1867.”

Nor can we omit, in concluding this notice of a most remarkable book, some notice of the disputes as to its authorship. The newspapers have been full of them. Mr. Anders, rector of Kirkby, writes early in April of this year to assure the world that "the author of Adam Bede is Mr. Liggins, of Nuncaton, Warwickshire, and the characters whom he paints in Scenes of Clerical Life, are as familiar there as the twin spires of Coventry." But just as we have satisfied our minds that this is the true state of the case, and are feeling greatly obliged to Mr. Anders, a wrathful letter from "George Eliot" disturbs us; asking (not unreasonably) whether "the act of publishing a book deprives a man of all claim to the courtesies usual amongst gentlemen?" . . . Then some gentleman is "receiving subscriptions" as the ill-used author of Adam Bede. Finally, the Messrs. Blackwood, turning at last to throw a stone, declare that, "those works are not written by Mr. Liggins, or by any one with a name like Liggins." . . . Now upon all this we have only to remark, that we cordially agree in the dictum of Mr. Eliot, that "the attempt to pry into what is obviously meant to be withheld,—his name,—is quite indefensible.—*Edinb. FLETCHER (Grenville).

LITERARY BORROWING.

[To the Editor of the ATHENÆUM.]

Ivy Cottage, Ballard's Lane, Finchley, Jan. 1, 1867.

May I utter a complaint touching a Mr. Grenville Fletcher, late editor of the Kentish Champion, Court Journal, Mirror of the World, Hants Standard, &c. Looking, as I always do, in old bookshops, I came across a volume, the other day, professing to be a third series of "Parliamentary Portraits," by this gentleman. A very small piece of silver secured for me possession of the prize. On taking it home and examining it, I find page after page reprinted from my "Modern Statesmen," without a single word of acknowledgment. Mr. Fletcher gives a sketch of Viscount Palmerston, almost entirely mine. He devotes eight pages to Sir James Graham; and more than six of them are mine. I wrote an article on Mr. Brand; Mr. Fletcher reprints it, slightly altering it. Thus he commences: "It was during the lull of an evening debate I once beheld Lord John Russell carrying on a friendly and good-natured conversation, on the Government benches of the House of Commons. To see his lordship smile is a very unusual circumstance, for he is mostly so excessively cold in his manner—added to which there is a rigid demeanour about him—as one would only expect to be evinced by a great man, knowing that he is part and parcel of that wonderful machine the British Constitution." I had written: "It was once my good fortune to behold Lord John Russell smile, and carry on a friendly conversation, on the Government benches of the British House of Commons. Generally his lordship is cold and dignified in his demeanour, as becomes a man who is part and parcel of that wonderful machine the British Constitution." In like manner Mr. Fletcher has helped himself to my Sketches of Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Lindsay. This gifted work is dedicated to Lord Llanover, and bears on the title-page the respectable name of Mr. James Ridgway, Piccadilly. In his Introduction the author expresses his gratitude to the members of his own craft (the public press) for the truthful, generous, and impartial mode in which his portraits have been critically noticed." Surely Mr. Fletcher might have expressed his gratitude to, amongst others, yours, &c.

This anonymous translator "violated the fidelity which he owed to his author" by suppressing numerous passages, without taking the slightest notice of such, and by altering other passages, and in fact "cooking it up" to serve the then prevalent French notions. A full account will be found in the Edinburgh Rev., 1810. Quérard in his France Littéraire, quotes a passage which intimates that Napoleon himself had a hand in the mutilation and suppression of the obnoxious passages.

We believe he was not. It is most extraordinary that two persons should, about the same time, write abridgments of the same work, under the same pseudonym. But another extraordinary point is that John Richard Green died in 1818, five years before his abridgment was published! Mr. Foss seems to have been translated into German.

This trifle was written at Cheltenham, in the autumn of 1812, and published anonymously in the spring of the following year. It was not very well received at the time by the public; and the author was by no means anxious that it should be considered as his handiwork. "I fear," he says, in a letter to a friend, "that a certain malicious publication on waltzing is attributed to me. IRELAND (Samuel William Henry) literary forger

Miscellaneous Papers and Instruments under the hand and Seal of William Shakespeare, including the Tragedy of King Lear, and a small fragment of Hamlet, from the original. 1796, folio, £4. 4s.

An imposture on a grander scale was never conceived or executed; and perhaps we may add, with all respect to the learned celebrities who were deceived by it, that dupes more easily satisfied, more credulous and unsuspecting, were never met with. It must be admitted that a very opportune period was chosen for the imposition; and taking into consideration the youth of the individual by whom it was perpetrated,—that he had not at the time attained his twentieth year,—it must also be confessed that it was carried out with considerable cleverness and ingenuity.

Ireland was the son of a gentleman who is known as the author of several Picturesque Tours, and some illustrations of Hogarth—a man of considerable taste, and an ardent admirer of Shakespeare.

He had been articled to an attorney, and having daily opportunities of inspecting ancient deeds and writings, he seems to have occupied his leisure, first in deciphering, and afterwards in copying and imitating them. Possessed of this dangerous talent, his father's reverence for the great English dramatist, and his own ambition for distinction, suggested to his mind the daring imposture by which he rendered himself remarkable. From an attentive examination of the authentic signature of Shakespeare, he soon learned to imitate the character of his handwriting with facility; and from time to time presented his father with scraps of MS., to account for the possession of which he invented a most romantic and improbable story.

For a long time Ireland made almost daily additions to his pretended discoveries. Was it possible that his father had no suspicion of their origin, and was he entirely deceived by the monstrous assertions of his clever but unprincipled son? The appearance of the MSS. went far to prove their genuineness. A number of literary gentlemen voluntarily subscribed their names to a declaration of their authenticity. It is further stated that Mr. Boswell, the biographer of Johnson, previously to signing his name, fell upon his knees, and in a tone of enthusiasm and exultation thanked God he had lived to witness the discovery, and exclaimed that he could now die in peace.

One of the ablest critics of the day, however, Mr. Malone, remained unconvinced.

Believing himself possessed of a most invaluable treasure—in spite of the protestations of his son, who dreaded and foresaw the exposure of the fraud—Mr. Samuel Ireland determined on publishing the “discoveries,” and printed a large portion of them in a fine folio volume, the title of which is given at the head of this article.

A very slight examination of this volume would, it has been thought, have shown the transparency of the fraud.

The most daring imposition, however, remains to be told. On the 2nd of April, 1796, the play of Vortigern and Rowena “from the pen of Shakespeare,” was announced for representation at Drury Lane Theatre. Public excitement was at its height. As the evening approached, every avenue to the theatre was thronged with anxious crowds, eager to obtain admission. Thousands, it is said, were turned away.

The fraud, however, was very soon discovered, and an attempt that was made to announce the play for repetition was wisely withdrawn, the unanimous voice of the public having proclaimed the imposture. This failure was a death-blow to the fraud. Gratified by the notoriety he had acquired, Ireland was induced to publish the following full and free confession in “An Authentic Account of the Shakespeare Manuscripts.”

“I solemnly declare, first, that my father was perfectly unacquainted with the whole affair, believing the papers most firmly the productions of Shakespeare. Secondly, that I am myself both the author and writer, and had no aid from any soul living, and that I should never have gone so far, but that the world praised the papers so much, and thereby flattered my vanity. Thirdly, that any publication which may appear tending to prove the MSS. genuine, or to contradict what is here stated, is false; this being the true account.

W. H. IRELAND.”

It must be confessed that circumstances seemed to warrant the suspicion that father and son were equally implicated, and even the latter's solemn declaration to the contrary could not remove the impression that had been made on the public mind. To the time of his death, in 1835, he carried with him the significant sobriquet of Shakespeare Ireland.

The above is chiefly abridged from the article by F. Lawrence in Sharpe's London Magazine.

In Chalcographomania, which is said to be written by Ireland, these observations are made. They almost seem to render his being its author doubtful.

Weeps o'er false Shakesperian lore,
Which sprang from Maistorre Ireland's store ;
Whose impudence deserves the rod,
For having ap'd the muse's god.

To this latter the following note is added.

"It has frequently afforded me a matter of astonishment to think how this literary fraud could have so long duped the world, and involved in its deceptious vortex such personages as Parr, Wharton, and Sheridan, not omitting Jemmy Boswell, of Johnsonian renown ; nor can I even refrain from smiling whensoever the volumes of Malone and Chalmers, together with the pamphlets of Boaden, Waldron, Wyatt, and Philalethes, otherwise — Webb, Esq., chance to fall in my way." —p. 57.

JOBSON (Frederick J.) D.D.

Whether Dr. Jobson has been guilty of plagiarism is a difficult matter to determine. So difficult, that taking into consideration his denial, we shall let our readers judge for themselves, by giving the accusation and answer from the Athenæum, with no alteration but a correction of the paging, etc.

Supposing that there is no ground for accusing Dr. Jobson of borrowing without acknowledgment, then this correspondence comes in as part of our plan. It certainly is one of the most remarkable instances of two writers expressing their ideas in similar words, though at an interval of several years.

LITERARY LARCENY.

[To the Editor of the Athenæum].

Hammersmith, Feb. 14, 1863.

Some four or five years ago I published a little book of Travels called 'Southern Lights and Shadows,' which—thanks to kindly notices in your columns and elsewhere—was tolerably successful. The work, however, was sadly abused in the Australian colonies, and, for some reason or other which was never made apparent to me, gave sore offence to the Methodists of New South Wales. The volume has,

I think, run out of print, and is probably by this time forgotten. Nevertheless, it has strangely been decreed that a leader of the body who were most offended at it shall revive and perpetuate its "obnoxious" pages.

Within the last day or two a "second edition" of a book entitled 'Australia; with Notes by the Way,' by Frederick J. Jobson, D.D., has come under my notice. I cannot exactly tell what led me to look into its pages, unless from a desire of seeing how a Methodist divine would deal with a subject which, under my treatment, had proved so unpleasant to the Wesleyan community of Trans-Pacifica. Imagine my surprise when I found that, from the opening to the close of Dr. Jobson's volume, the leading paragraphs were stolen from my 'Southern Lights and Shadows'! This is a serious charge to bring against any author, and so specially serious when brought against an author who carries D.D. at the end of his name, that I feel bound to support it with direct and unmistakeable evidence. I append, therefore, in parallel columns, a few of the passages which appeared in 'Southern Lights and Shadows' in 1859, and which now re-appear, with but the slightest and shallowest disguise (a disguise of so transparent a character that, like the coa vestis, it only serves to reveal what it affects to hide), in 'Australia; with Notes by the Way,' in 1863:

My Book [1859].

The evenings in Australia are singularly beautiful. I have often read a newspaper by the light of the moon. The stars are very white and large, and seem to drop pendulous from the blue, like silver lamps from a dome of calaite.—P. 85.

Dr. Jobson's Book [1863].

The evenings at Sydney were at times singularly beautiful. The moon was so bright and large that you could see to read by it. The stars, too, were brighter and larger than ours in appearance, and seemed to drop like pendent lamps of glittering crystal from the deep blue dome above.—P. 126.

All Dr. Jobson does here is to give us his new lamps of crystal for my old ones of silver.

My Book.

In Sydney and its immediate neighbourhood there are no less than five hundred public-houses, many of them as great and garish as the gin-palaces of London.

P. 52.

There are more than five hundred public-houses in Sydney and its immediate neighbourhood, and some of them are as . . . gay and garish as our own street corner gin palaces.—P. 157.

As Dr. Jobson was writing three years after me, he, no doubt, conceived it a safe and subtle alteration to turn the word "less" into "more;" but as the "five" was a misprint for three in my book, his caution has only made the trap into which he has put his foot clip it the closer. A similar maladroitness characterizes the reverend author's picking and stealing throughout. The reader will see it strikingly displayed in the next example, where the sentences are so unaltered in themselves, and yet so changed in their sequence and order, that, like the boy who steals the eggs in 'Parents and Guardians,' Dr. Jobson evidently thinks he has only to shift position to annihilate identity.

[For brevity we here omit two long parallel passages].

In the first-quoted plagiarism Dr. Jobson gave "crystal" for "silver"—in the above he supplies "brittle pottery" for "crystal." My "dogs" only are afflicted by the hot wind—Dr. Jobson blasts the beasts of the field and the birds of the air. My "great-coat is buttoned tightly around" me—Dr. Jobson's "great-coat" is only thought "desirable." But this is accounted for, as with me the thermometer "sinks fifty or sixty degrees," while with Dr. Jobson it "sinks down" but "forty or fifty." My "compact wall," "Last Seal" and "Apocalypse," however, are taken bodily. It is scarcely worth while pointing out the ludicrous errors which, in "dodging" my description about, Dr. Jobson has committed. The "brickfielder" is not the hot wind at all; it is but another name for the cold wind or "southerly-buster," which follows the hot breeze, and which, blowing over an extensive sweep of sand-hills, called the Brickfields, semicircling Sydney, carries a thick cloud of dust (or "brickfielder") across the city. How true is old Butler's remark that some plagiarists accompany their robberies with murder to prevent detection!

My Book.

It (the mosquito) comes buzzing against your cheek with a drowsy sing-song whir, fixes its suckers into the flesh, and bounds off with another song—a kind of curmen triumphale—leaving a large red mark behind it, which is far more irritating than a healing blister . . . They have a great relish—being epicures in their way—for the round, fat, mottled part of the hand ridging the off-side of the palm. In about two seconds one will sow it with bumps and blisters from the wrist to the little finger . . . They, too, especially hate and harass the new chum.

Pp. 83-4.

Dr. Jobson's book.

The pungent bites of mosquitoes, which in the evening, whether in public, social, or private life, come buzzing against your cheek with a peculiar whir, fixing their blood-suckers in the flesh, and then, after drawing their full portion, flying off with a flutter of triumph, leaving a blotch behind, which, until ripened to a yellow head, is far more irritating than a healing blister. . . And they have evidently a high relish for the round fat part of the hand, from the wrist-bone to the little finger. If this part be exposed from under the coverlid for five minutes, it will be sown all over by them with bumps and blisters, not to be forgotten till the next night, if so soon. They, too, like the boys in the streets, have wanton pleasure in vexing "new chums."

Pp. 158-9.

One very brief illustration more, and I have finished with Dr. Jobson:—

My Book.

The shark gleaming, green and still, just an arm's depth below the surface.—P. 131.

Dr. Jobson's Book.

Sat. March 2.—Pleasant passage down the harbour, in which, gleaming, still and green, at not more than an arm's depth from the surface, the ravenous shark might be seen.—P. 173.

This last example raises one's gorge. I close my book with an attempt at a panorama of sea scenery, and, in the middle of a sentence, are the words quoted in the left hand column above. Dr. Jobson, after concluding his description of Sydney with these words,—“Only let the churches of Christ send an adequate number of missionaries to India, China, the multitude of the isles, and to the interior of Africa, and these heathen regions shall assuredly be evangelized: these realms of sin become the kingdom of our God and of his Christ!” (p. 174)—opens the next section of his book with my fish! If a whale once appropriated a missionary, verily here is a missionary appropriating a shark!

In closing, let me say that my only object in asking you to insert this letter is to direct other writers on the subject to Dr. Jobson's book. If he has taken so much from me, I have no doubt he has—to use an Australian phrase—“jumped other claims” for the balance of his nuggets.

FRANK FOWLER.

47, City Road, March 3, 1863.

In justice alike to me and to the public who have purchased, within fourteen months nearly three editions of my volume on ‘Australia, with Notes by the Way,’ I am sure you will give me space to reply to a communication which appeared in your columns of February 21, but which I did not see till nearly the end of last week.

As to any quarrel which your Correspondent has had with my friends on the other side of the globe I know nothing at all. Up to the time when his letter was given in the Athenæum, I had not heard of his ‘Southern Lights and Shadows;’ and as he states that the book is out of print, I cannot hope to examine it [Dr. Jobson could have seen it in the British Museum], else I should be curious to learn how his “little book” on New South Wales only, could supply the “leading paragraphs” “from the opening to the close” of my post-octavo volume of nearly three hundred pages [only 112 pages relate to Australia and Tasmania], and which treats, not only of all the Australasian Colonies, but also of all the principal countries in the way to them. I might also try to ascertain whether he has broken up his own paragraphs, after the fashion of his dealing with mine [The paragraphs seem to us fairly quoted.] Every one knows how easy it is by such a process to make things look alike, which are in their own setting and original connexion sufficiently different. Not that I am about to charge this writer with intentional misrepresentation: an attempt at brevity may be a great part of the explanation.

The fact is, that in my travels I did as everybody else does: that is, I read whatever came in my way bearing on the countries through which I was passing; but I took care to note down my own observations and impressions; and if, in doing so, some terms, perfectly true to my own views, though, possibly, they had been employed by others, adhered to my memory, and found their way into my manuscript, no reader of books of travel could feel surprise. In the several colonies of Australia, as in other parts of the world (as often as I could do so), I availed myself of the judgment of intelligent friends, who had the advantage of longer residence, with a view to secure accuracy in the statement of facts, etc. In this instance, there are peculiar circumstances which, for explanation and proof, rest upon minute examination, not only of my own manuscript notes, but also of the written suggestions of others. And had the complainant communicated with me through my publisher, or otherwise, there would have been supplied to him evidence fully to account for the apparent resemblances in subjects and terms to which he has referred. He has not done so; and as I do not choose to leave the case, as it really is, to depend upon my own single assertion, I have submitted it, with all the papers in question, to gentlemen whose public character and intellectual competency are above suspicion. They all have authorized the appending of their names to the following declaration by themselves; but as it is not necessary to give all their signatures, I content myself with two: the one by a gentleman of Cornwall, well known by his numerous writings; and the other by a minister of high standing in the metropolis.

FREDERICK J. JOBSON.

"At Dr. Jobson's request, we have examined the manuscripts and proofs, to which reference is made above; and are fully satisfied of the correctness of his statement; and that there is no just cause, literary or otherwise, for the unfavourable reflections which have been cast upon him

The following, from the Athenæum, requires no explanation from us :—

THE MANUFACTURE OF NOVELS.

The literary people of New York are wrangling over a matter which, like many causes of dispute, derives importance from the ingenuity and warmth of the discussion which it provokes. Amongst other points that await judgment, the squabble has raised a question concerning an English novelist who would act prudently in publishing without delay her part in the transactions that have raised a Grub Street tempest on the other side of the Atlantic. At this present time the proprietors of the New York Sunday Mercury are publishing in their paper a novel, entitled 'Nobody's Daughter; or, the Ballad Singer of Wapping,' which they announce in highly sensational advertisements as an original work from the pen of Miss Braddon, of whom they observe, with characteristic magniloquence and capitals :— "Two Worlds have indorsed Miss E. Braddon as a novelist of transcendent power,—the Old World and the New. The English reviews have carped at her works—probably because they had not soul enough to appreciate them; but the very magazines in which their petti-fogging criticisms are published have since found it to their interest to beg for stories from her pen, paying her such price therefor as she thought fit to demand, and she queens it to-day in the department of Sensational Romance wherever the English language is spoken." Whilst they thus proclaim Miss Braddon's royal status, these same masters of sensational advertisement speak tall words about their own merits, stating very distinctly that they are citizens of whom the Union has reason to be proud, and that their Sunday Mercury is "the newspaper that occupies the throne of Sunday journalism." Next to personal possession of a throne, the sole and unlimited possession of that which occupies a throne may be regarded as the highest object of mere worldly ambition; and we congratulate their Majesties one-degree removed of the New York Sunday Mercury on their tenure of royal rank,—although their throne is nothing more splendid than the editorial chair of a Sunday newspaper. Nor do we warmly censure the enthusiasm, though we may question the judgment which they display in fighting for Miss Braddon's crown. Since they have "soul enough" to admire her novels, by all means let them put to shame those English reviews "which carped at her works, probably because they had not soul enough to appreciate them." But if upon inquiry it should be ascertained either that they have been induced to regard as Miss Braddon's work a story of which she never wrote a line, or that they have conspired to hoax the public for their own private advantage, what will be thought of these several occupants of thrones?

On one side it is asserted that in assigning 'Nobody's daughter' to Miss Braddon, the proprietors of the Sunday Mercury are only endeavouring to draw attention to their paper by an impudent fabrication; and those who take this view of the case argue thus:—'Nobody's Daughter' is merely a reprint, under a new title, of 'Diavola,' a story that is now being published in the London Journal, by the author of 'The Black Band.' So far, a London reader can safely follow the New York disputant; for the current number of the London Journal (Feb 16, 1867,) contains chaps. 37—39 of the story called 'Diavola,' by the author of 'The Black Band.'

It seems clear, therefore, either that Miss Braddon is the author of 'The Black Band,' or that she is not the writer of 'Nobody's Daughter.' Which of these two? Against the first supposition the New York Critics bring forward the following evidence. They say that in the summer of last year, when 'The Black Band,' which originally appeared in the London Journal, was republished in New York by Messrs. Hilton & Co., under the new name of 'What is this Mystery?' Miss Braddon indignantly denied the authorship of the story, and protested against the conduct of the publishers who advertised the book as a production of her pen. How then, it is urged, can Miss Braddon, who has explicitly disclaimed the authorship of 'The Black Band,' be the writer of 'Nobody's Daughter,' alias 'Diavola,' which is announced in the London Journal as written by the author of 'The Black Band'?

On the other side, the occupants of "the throne of Sunday Journalism" reiterate their assertion that 'Nobody's Daughter' is from Miss Braddon's pen, and that they paid the lady a "munificent price" for early sheets of the work, together with permission to publish it under a new title. They denounce all journals that venture to express incredulity of their statements, as "concerns on their last legs, and destitute alike of brains and principle." Moreover, a gentleman acting for the proprietors has exhibited, in New York, papers that are represented to be Miss Braddon's receipts for two sums of £75. each, instalments of the sum of £250., which was the munificent price spoken of in the advertisements of the work. This same person has also exhibited letters which he says were written to the proprietors of the Sunday Mercury respecting the early sheets of 'Diavola,' by Mr. Maxwell, of London. If we felt ourselves justified in accepting the statements thus put forth by the proprietors of the Sunday Mercury as unquestionably true, we should regard them as settling the question respecting the authorship of 'The Black Band' and 'Diavola.' But the gentlemen who act for the throne of Sunday journalism use language with such singular freedom that we hesitate to put unqualified reliance on their assurances. A certain measure of distrust is surely due to men who have the astounding impudence to say that the English reviews which criticized Miss Braddon with severity have been glad to make friendly overtures to her, and buy her tales at her own price!

With respect to Miss Braddon our counsel is that she should lose no time in giving her explanation of facts that may be unfairly used to her disadvantage.

Tremadoc, Feb. 26, 1867.

As Miss Braddon does not seem inclined to "give her explanations" as to whether she is or not the author of 'The Black Band' ('Diavola,' I believe, is not denied), but is content that Lady Caroline Lascelles (whoever she may be) should have the credit of it, I think, on looking at the facts, there will be no difficulty in setting this vexed question at rest. It appears that 'The Black Band' originally appeared in the Halfpenny Journal, the proprietor of that journal being Mr. Maxwell. 'Diavola' is now being published in the London Journal, as by the author of 'The Black Band,' early sheets of which Mr. Maxwell negotiated for sale in America. Finally, Mr. Maxwell is the proprietor of Belgravia, edited by Miss Braddon. . . . Surely in the interests of literature it behoves Mr. Maxwell that he should lose no time in giving his explanation of this scandal, which may be used to Miss Braddon's disadvantage. HUGH MORGAN.

Concerning "The Black Band Scandal," Mr. John Maxwell—in a letter published in last week's Athenæum [March 11]—makes some strange admissions, though he seems to be under the impression that he reveals nothing of importance. The proprietor of the Halfpenny Journal, and the confidential agent who negotiated between Miss Braddon and the New York Sunday Mercury, Mr. Maxwell writes, "If the 'interests of literature' were in any way involved in my revealing who suggested, who planned, and who wrote the romance of 'The Black Band' and other serials under the same non de plume which appeared in the Halfpenny Journal, I should be happy to name the authors, as soon as I had obtained their permission, and could apportion the shares of merit to which their respective ingenuity and industry entitle them; but as the 'interests of literature' do not appear to me to be, in the slightest degree, affected, I shall not take any trouble to destroy the anonymous reserve under which these tales were written." Here is an instructive peep into a factory of novels for the halfpenny press, the showman of the sight being himself the master of the mill. The operatives of the workshop are duly classified as suggesters, planners, writers; and it appears that, though the novels thus turned out are the patchwork of many "hands," the watchful director of the factory could, if it pleased him to do so, "apportion the shares of merit to which their respective ingenuity and industry entitle them." With discreet reticence, that stands in strong contrast against the indiscretion of his frankness, Mr. Maxwell says nothing about his plans for distributing the goods made in his factory. He does not tell us how it came to pass that one of the novels thus manufactured was called 'The Black Band' in England, and 'What is this Mystery?' in America; how it came to be falsely attributed to Lady Caroline Lascelles in this country, and (Miss Braddon's denial of its authorship being our evidence) no less falsely attributed to Miss Braddon on the other side of the Atlantic; how 'Diavola' came to be attributed to "the author of 'The Black Band'" in the London Journal, whereas early sheets of the tale appear to have been sold through Mr. Maxwell's agency in New York as early sheets of a new tale by Miss Braddon; and how it comes that the proprietors of the New York Sunday Mercury can exhibit papers that purport to be Miss Braddon's receipts for money paid to her for early sheets of this novel by the author of 'The Black Band,' though she has indignantly repudiated the authorship of 'What is this Mystery?' alias 'The Black Band.' All these and other like matters are mysteries, and we are content that they should remain so. We concur with Mr. Maxwell in thinking that the interests of literature do not require him to publish the names of all the suggesters, planners, writers, and other journeymen who ply their craft in his factory. He has told everything that persons immediately concerned in the interests of literature can need or care to know about the matter.

March 14, 1867.

I have this day received a copy of a New York paper, the Sunday Mercury, dated February 27, in which are three or four chapters of a serial tale, entitled 'Nobody's Daughter; or the Ballad Singer of Wapping,' by Miss M. E. Braddon, together with an abstract of published chapters; and as these are identical with the tale now publishing in the London Journal, under the title of 'Diavolo,' by the author of 'The Black Band,' I think with Mr. Morgan, there can be no difficulty in identifying under the nom de plume of Lady Caroline Lascelles the Miss Braddon of Belgravia. M. B.

4, Shoe Lane, Fleet Street, March 18, 1867.

It is sometimes easy and sometimes difficult to raise a tempest in a tea-pot; and, it appears to me, that under the title of "Manufacture of Novels," you are trying to solve the difficulty. In last Saturday's Athenæum you ask "how it comes that the proprietors of the New York Sunday Mercury can exhibit papers that purport to be Miss Braddon's receipts for money paid to her for early sheets of this novel ('Diavolo') by the author of 'The Black Band'?" Allow me to say that the proprietors of the New York Sunday Mercury do not exhibit any paper whatever purporting to be Miss Braddon's receipt, although they can exhibit mine, and that most honourably too, for they have honestly paid to me the amounts for which I have given them receipts; and, I regret to add, they have not always been left in peaceful possession of their advance-sheets by rival American publishers, who live on the policy of stealing as much literature as they can, reckless of all considerations beyond their own expectations of gain. As illustrating this latter class of sharp practitioners, it is necessary to recall Messrs. Hilton and Co., of New York. These people announce 'What is this Mystery?' as reprinted from Miss Braddon's advance-sheets, when it was reprinted from nothing of the kind; and they advertise the work as being Miss Braddon's "latest and best," when they well know it is neither the one nor the other. Against this Miss Braddon protested. Had she no right to do so? Was everything quite as it should be on the part of Messrs. Hilton and Co.? And was Miss Braddon altogether wrong in intimating that she knew nothing whatever about Messrs. Hilton and Co.'s enterprise beyond their advertisement; she never had, directly or indirectly, the smallest approach to a communication from or with them? If you think Miss Braddon in the wrong, and Messrs. Hilton and Co. in the right in this transaction, let it be so; others may differ from you.

Another point—the "inconvenience to readers, and perplexity, if not substantial loss, to 'the trade,'" as the result of republication. Of course, if no republication has happened, no inconvenience to readers, and no perplexity and loss to "the trade" can arise. Now this is precisely the case with the tales assumed to be by the author of 'The Black Band'—a series which I hope will one day challenge criticism as romances of strong and popular interest, quite as worthy of republication as any of the tales reproduced from halfpenny and penny journals by Messrs. Hurst and Blackett, and by other equally well-esteemed novel-publishers. Although these tales are not reprinted, you use against them the word "convicted," and you apply that term to them in common with "the system" of Mrs. Wood and Mr. Wills, both of whom admit, and rather defend, the republication of reprints with emendations. Is this fair on your part? You are wholly unsustained in the use of the word, and its application is alike unnecessary and uncalled for.

Next as to the nom de plume of Lady Caroline Lascelles. This title was suggested by my late literary colleague, who was also at the time a writer in the Athenæum, poor Sir C. E. Lascelles Wraxall, Bart. He claimed a family right in the names. For five weeks the non de plume was adopted. At the end of that time it was discarded, as it was found that "fine words butter no parsnips;" and the tale of "The Black Band" was thenceforth published anonymously, and its publication, and that of the series of tales which succeeded, went on uninterruptedly for years. In all this, what deduction is to be drawn? simply that a series of tales have been written for the cheap periodical press so very attractive as to occasion their reprint in America, and so very profitable as to induce both literary pirates and purchasers of advance-sheets to make the most of their adventures. Surely in this there is little to excite acrimonious controversy.

JOHN MAXWELL.

[It is difficult to understand why the following letter should be written in such a vulgar tone. We regret the necessity of inserting it here.]

ENGLISH AUTHORS IN AMERICA.

128, Nassau Street, New York, April 25, 1867.

Our attention having been called to a communication in your issue of March 23, wherein one "John Maxwell" has been pleased to stigmatize us as "sharp practitioners," as well as to bestow upon us other not very complimentary epithets, in relation to the manner in which the immaculate trader in Miss Braddon's productions conceives we have maltreated that lady's reputation, we deem it incumbent upon us to ask your indulgence in placing the true facts of the case before your readers, inasmuch as your correspondent has managed adroitly to dodge the real offence attempted to be fastened upon us in our business capacity.

We do not pretend to justify our custom of the American trade in appropriating Transatlantic literature without rendering some recompence to the original authors. Still, in the absence of an international copyright, publishers are not inclined to court extra risks, as they cannot be protected against ruinous competition in any enterprise undertaken on a basis of remuneration. It may suit the purpose of a newspaper with a stable circulation to secure the advance sheets of a story from the pen of a popular English writer, but in the matter of a cheap publication of a completed romance, there can be no guarantee against its reproduction by a competing house, possibly from a copy secured at a rational cost within a few days after its emission.

In our series of cheap publications, we saw fit to reprint, under the title of 'What is this Mystery?' a romance originally published in London as 'The Black Band.' A similar designation had been bestowed upon a local romance, written in this city some years back, and of which we hold the copyright. To prevent confusion, we took the liberty of changing the title of Miss Braddon's work, but affixed her own proper name to maintain identity as to authorship. Almost instantly, we were assailed by the city journals, and charged with having imposed upon the reading public, through palming off, as a work of Miss Braddon's, the production of some obscure novelist. The lady herself, or some person representing her interests, thought proper to encourage presumption of fraud until this period, when the Sunday Mercury advertising under precisely similar circumstances, 'Diavola,' avowedly from the same source as 'The Black Band,' Miss Braddon hastens to the rescue of its editors, and reluctantly acknowledges authorship of both romances, the latter one of which Mr. Maxwell contends to have been "honourably" obtained through purchase of so-called "advance sheets;" whereas our offence appears to have consisted in the fact of reprinting, without her express sanction, from a London publication, a work for which the London publisher had, as we presume, paid its market value. Assuredly, if any party be entitled to recompense for "advance sheets," it should be the individual purchasing Miss Braddon's literary wares, and seeking repayment through their publication. Besides, we are frank enough to consider it as a poor compliment to the manager of a periodical, investing in goods of that nature, to suggest that the "latest" published productions of any author are not the "best," especially when a multiplicity of similar commodities are in the field. We regret that Miss Braddon or her friend should be compelled to protest against our critical judgment as to the work reprinted by us being her "latest and best;" but must extenuate our interested opinion on the ground that a declaration to the contrary might prove detrimental to the reputation of the fair authoress, and decidedly inimical to her future chances of disposing of "advance sheets."

HILTON & Co.

4, Shoe Lane, Fleet Street, May 11, 1867.

To judge from the tone of their letter in this day's Athenæum, Messrs. Hilton & Co. appear to think that, by adding insult to injury, they can extenuate their conduct and cast aside the opprobrium which their dishonesty should entail. They do not attempt to deny the charges made against them, which may be briefly stated as follows:—

1. That they appropriated a tale, changed its name, and announced it as reprinted from the author's "advance sheets," when they well knew the reprint was from nothing of the kind, and that, in fact, they never had, either directly or indirectly, the slightest communication from or with the author or the publisher of the tale they so "smartly" laid their hands upon.

2. That they described this tale as Miss Braddon's "latest and best," when they well knew it was neither latest nor best; and that, beyond their own audacity, they had no justification for ascribing the authorship to Miss Braddon.

For their own purposes Messrs. Hilton & Co. did all this; and as they advertised the tale to have achieved a sale of 18,000 copies within a week of publication, Messrs. Hilton & Co. might have been content with the gains of the operation. No one here expected anything from them. Instead, however, of being satisfied with the fruits of their rapacity, Messrs. Hilton & Co. have thought fit to turn round upon Miss Braddon, whose name they most unfairly used for their own dishonest purpose, and now they try their best to insult her by declaring "assuredly, if any party be entitled to recompense for 'advance sheets,' it should be the individual purchasing Miss Braddon's literary wares, and seeking repayment through their publication." The sheer insolence of this declaration transcends the old story of the attorney who had no defence to an action, and therefore instructed counsel—"No case; abuse plaintiff's witnesses." In England the value of Miss Braddon's literary wares is well understood; and in America the importance of her "advance sheets" commands an adequate recompense, a circumstance with which the "business capacity" of Messrs. Hilton & Co. cannot make them acquainted. I refrain from noticing the other statements in Messrs. Hilton & Co.'s letter, because they are, so far as the matter in issue is concerned, simply untrue.

JOHN MAXWELL.

'Rupert Godwin, by Miss M. E. Braddon,' it appears was originally published in the Halfpenny Journal, under the title of 'The Banker's Secret,' by the author of 'The Black Band.'

C. R. Jackson, Athenæum, 2073, p. 82.

The manufacture of Novels now occupies so many writers, and is a system that so deeply concerns the public, that we have devoted a large space to the above exposure: larger, in fact, than we wished; but fairness demanded that the whole or none of the controversy should be inserted.

LAUDER (William) literary-forger.

"Mr. Isaac D'Israeli, in his 'Curiosities of Literature,' has remarked that some of the most sinister literary forgeries in modern times have been perpetrated by Scotchmen, and he instances Lauder and Bower—two of the blackest sheep of the world of letters. The disgraceful fraud of which the former stands convicted, so unparalleled for its meanness, baseness, and dishonesty, has justly condemned him to eternal infamy, and rendered his name a by-word of contempt. To the credit of English literature, it did not indeed long remain undiscovered, and it may at least be said to have had one beneficial result—that of placing the unwary on their guard against an unscrupulous disputant, and of demonstrating the importance and necessity of occasionally verifying a quotation and testing a doubtful assertion.

“In 1747 he commenced his attack on the reputation of Milton in various communications to the ‘Gentleman’s Magazine,’ in which the great poet was denounced as an unprincipled plagiarist.

These papers having led to some controversy, and excited some attention, Lauder was induced to collect them, and in 1750 he republished them in a volume, entitled ‘An Essay on Milton’s Use and Abuse of the Moderns in his Paradise Lost,’ with the motto taken from Milton, “Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.” The work is preceded by a characteristic advertisement from Lauder, which states that “(Gentlemen who are desirous of securing their children from ill example, or are themselves disposed to gain or retrieve the knowledge of the Latin tongue, may be waited on at their own houses by the author of the following Essay,” an announcement certainly calculated to convey the idea that the “canny Scot” regarded his erudite performance as an excellent mercantile speculation, and favorable medium of publicity. To render the work more remarkable, the preface and postscript were contributed by Dr. Samuel Johnson.” Johnson contributed prefaces and postscripts to works he had never read with the greatest ease, as his collected works show.

“The authors from whom Lauder accused Milton of borrowing without acknowledgment, were some of them all but unknown in what was then called the learned world. Among them was Masenius, a Jesuit of Cologne, Taubmann, a German, and Staphorstius, a learned Dutchman. From these and other authors passages were quoted in some of which there was a general resemblance, and in others a close similarity to the most admired portions of ‘Paradise Lost.’”

“But Lauder’s triumph was of short duration. The detection of the imposition, and the chastisement of the impostor fell into able hands. Upon its publication the work attracted the attention of the Rev. John Douglas, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, whose jealous regard for the reputation of Milton, induced him to investigate its contents. Confident of the great poet’s integrity, and not content with Lauder’s assertions, he proceeded, with considerable pains, to search for the passages which had been quoted from Masenius, Staphorstius, Grotius, and others. The result was most triumphant:

in nearly every instance he found that Lauder had tampered with the text, and had impudently inserted several lines of a translation of the 'Paradise Lost' in Latin hexameters by William Hogg, and others of his own manufacture. The detection was so complete that the impostor had no alternative but confession. A full avowal of the fraud was accordingly drawn up by Dr. Samuel Johnson, who naturally enough considered his reputation somewhat involved in the transaction, and after some demur signed by Lauder. Upon a calm review of the whole circumstances of the case, we cannot, however, absolve Johnson from all blame. That he was the dupe of the impostor, and entirely innocent of the fraud, will be readily admitted; but can it be said that he exercised a proper discretion, in giving his sanction and support to a charge the accuracy of which he had not taken the trouble to investigate? . . .

"After the appearance of Dr. Douglas's reply the following advertisement (which we quote as a literary curiosity in its way) was inserted in the public newspapers by Lauder's publishers:—

"White Hart in Paternoster Row, London, Nov. 28, 1750.

"Upon the publication of the Rev. Mr. Douglas's Defence of Milton, in answer to Lauder, we immediately sent to Lauder, and insisted upon his clearing himself from the charge of forgery which Dr. Douglas has brought against him, by producing the books in question. He has this day admitted the charge, but with great insensibility.

"We therefore disclaim all connexion with him, and shall for the future sell his book ONLY as a masterpiece of fraud, which the public may be supplied with at 1s. 6d., stitched. # "JOHN PAYNE.

PARLEY (Peter) pseudonym [SAMUEL GRISWOLD GOOD-RICH, an American bookseller, who afterwards devoted himself entirely to Authorship. "In 1851, the President of the United States—his excellency Millard Fillmore—conferred a deserved compliment upon Mr. Goodrich by appointing him consul at Paris.”]

In the history of the world it would be impossible, we think, to find a more popular pseudonym than that of Peter Parley. Since 1828, one hundred and seventy volumes, bearing that name, or edited under it, have been issued. Of all these about 7,000,000 of volumes have been sold: about 300,000 volumes are now sold annually. Our plan precludes our giving the titles of these works, on almost every subject; but the curious reader will find a complete list in S. A. Allibone's Critical Dictionary of English Literature, 1859.

PARLEY (Peter). This pseudonym has been claimed, but without cause, and after his death, for the late Mr. S. Kettell (of America) the only pretext being that he had worked for the real “Simon Pure.” But the claim was as unjust as that now set up by Mr. Pugin that his father designed the Houses of Parliament.

PARLEY (Peter) impostor. *

As we have before observed that it would be almost impossible to find a name under which more popular and useful works have been written than this; so we think it would be difficult to find one which has been more the subject of barefaced and open robbery, both on the part of literators and publishers.

Among the most notorious we have Peter Parley's Annual, Darton & Co. (publishers), continued from 1841 to 1855, 14 vols. And 12 others by the same publishers, all spurious. Life of St. Paul, Simpkins, 1845. Visit to London, 1838, and Twelve Apostles, Bogue, 1844. 8 published by Tegg, 1837-40. Bible Geography, J. S. Hodson, 1839. Child's First Step, Clements, 1839.

PARLEY (Peter) impostor [WILLIAM MARTIN].

Peter Parley's Annual: a Christmas and New Year's Present for Young People. Edited by William Martin. (Darton & Co.) Lond., 1867. This is one of the spurious works above referred to.

The author who has so long traded on a dead writer's nom de plume avows himself. His name is William Martin. To those who care for Samuel Goodrich's honest fame in the world of letters, it will be interesting to know that his impersonator has again flung away a piece of his mask, and stands revealed as William Martin, Holly Lodge. Mr. Martin, you have taken one step in the right direction, and we congratulate you on that sign of uneasiness, if not of penitence. Why not take another step, and desist altogether from using Peter Parley's title, to which you have no kind of right that can be recognised in a court of honour.

P. P.'s Peeps at Paris, 1848. Our Oriental Kingdom, or Tales about India, 1857. The Travels, Voyages and Adventures of Gilbert Go-Ahead, 1857. The Hatchings of me and my Schoolfellows, edited by W. Martin 1858. P. P.'s Own Favourite Story Book, edited by W. M., 1864. The Holiday Keepsake, 1865.

We do not believe this list to contain anything like the number of spurious works.

PARLEY (Peter) impostor [GEORGE MOGRIDGE].

Tales about Shipwrecks and Disasters at Sea, 1827.

Great Britain and Ireland. Tales about Greece, 1837.

Tales about Rome and Modern Italy, 1839.

These are imitations of the real P. P.'s tales about Ancient and modern Greece. This seems to be the earliest thief.

PARLEY (Peter) allonym []

The Lives of the Twelve Apostles, 1844. The Life and Journeys of Paul the Apostle, 1845. The Travels and Adventures of Thomas Trotter, of Boston, U.S. [apocryph], as told by himself. Edited by Peter Parley, 1845.

This edition was revised by the Rev. T. Wilson.

"There are still other counterfeits of Parley's works, issued by various parties in London. The utter disregard of truth, honour, and decency, on the part of respectable British authors and publishers in this wholesale system of imposition and injustice, is all the more remarkable when we consider that the British public and especially the British authors and booksellers are denouncing us in America as pirates, for refusing international copyright.

"The conduct of all these parties places them, morally, on a footing with other counterfeiters and forgers: public opinion, in the United States, would consign persons conducting in this manner to the same degree of reprobation. Can it be that, in England, a man who utters a counterfeit five-pound note is sent to Newgate, while another may issue thousands of counterfeit volumes and not destroy his reputation?"—S. G. GOODRICH, see Allibone.

Ceylon being seceded to the English, caused Knox's long-forgotten book to be resuscitated. The publisher no doubt considered that a second edition of a work originally published in 1681 would not be likely to attract attention; he therefore got an introduction written, and appended the work of Knox, which forms the staple of the book.

PSALMANAZAR (George) pseudonym.

The most extraordinary impostor on record. He himself would never divulge his real name, wishing only to be known as an impostor. So degraded and vagabondish had his life been, that he assumed the above name, and bore it with him to the grave, having faithfully kept the secret of his birth and parentage.

He is now only remembered as the author of a strange fabrication, entitled :—

An Historical and Geographical Description of Formosa, an island subject to the Emperor of Japan. Giving an account of the Religion, Customs, Manners, &c., of the Inhabitants. Together with a relation of what happen'd to the author in his Travels ; particularly his Conferences with the Jesuits, and others, in several parts of Europe. Also the History and Reasons of his Conversion to Christianity, with his Objections against it (in defence of Paganism), and their Auswers. To which is prefixed a Preface in vindication of himself from the reflections of a Jesuit lately come from China, with an account of what passed between them. By GEORGE PSALMANAAZAAR, a native of the said Island, now in London. Illustrated with several cuts. Lond. Printed for Dan Brown, at the Black Swan without Temple-Bar, &c. 1704. 8vo ; 8 + xiv. + 2 + 131 + 4.

“Without having travelled out of Europe, he invented an account of an Asiatic island, and preserved sufficient consistency in his narrative to obtain for it, for a time, almost universal credence. Long after the imposture was discovered, the book was quoted as genuine, and it is admitted to carry with it an air of fact and reality, which does credit, at any rate, to the ingenuity of the author.

But Psalmanaazaar, “who is still in England, hath long since ingenuously owned the contrary, tho’ not in so publick a manner as he might perhaps have done had not such an avowment been likely to have affected some few persons, who for private ends took advantage of his youthful vanity, to encourage him in an imposture which he might otherwise never have had the thought, much less the confidence, to have carried on. Those persons being now dead, and out of all danger of being hurt by it, he now gives us leave to assure the world that the greatest part of that account was fabulous . . . and he designs to leave behind him a faithful account of that unhappy step . . . to be published after his death, when there will be less reason to suspect him of having disguised or palliated the truth.”—A Complete System of Geography. By Emanuel Brown. 1747. Fol. ii. 251.

It is said that Psalmanazar himself wrote the genuine account of Formosa in the above work as a compensation for his fabrication. But in the work itself the account is acknowledged to be taken from another author who resided there, but whose account is admitted to be almost as bad as Psalmanazar's.

But little interest now attaches to a fabrication once so famous. There was, however, a completeness about the imposture which renders it remarkable. Psalmanazar's great difficulty was to support the character he had assumed.

There was nothing Asiatic in his appearance; he was surrounded by sceptical inquirers, and frequently puzzled with questions and objections; but his hardihood and ingenuity enabled him to maintain his ground, and baffle his most pertinacious opponents. In the narrative of his life, which, in a spirit of penitence, he drew up in after-years, he has given an interesting account of the strange adventures of his youth. For this we must refer the reader to that work, or to any of the biographical dictionaries, or to the source whence we have adopted much—namely, Mr. Lawrence's article in Sharpe's London Magazine.

The first edition of the remarkable romance of which we have given the full title-page was soon exhausted, and another called for. The second edition contains "a new preface, clearly answering everything that has been objected against the author and the book, and a map and a figure of an idol not in the former impression." Many editions of the translation were published in France. In spite of its improbabilities, the book was devoutly believed. Psalmanazar was sent to Oxford, and maintained there by the Bishop of London.

The first period of Psalmanazar's life was, as he himself confessed, sufficiently infamous: in the second he endeavoured, by sincere repentance, to atone for his youthful errors and disreputable impostures. Dr. Johnson, who at the latter period knew him well, often stated that he was the best man he had ever known, and that he would as soon have thought of contradicting a bishop as George Psalmanazar.

During the latter portion of his life he supported himself entirely by literary pursuits. He wrote part of "the Universal History."

Let the juvenile reader inclined to pursue bibliography as a science, avoid it as he would a pest, for it will blight his prospects and shatter his constitution if pursued, as it must be, when once entered upon. But once entered upon, it is the broad path that leads to endless labour, no reward but fame amongst a few men of science. Let Robert Watt, his sons, Lowndes, and, above all, J. M. Quérard, be his warnings.

GERMAN PLAGIARISM.

We are apt to charge one another with copying from the Germans, and there may be some among us who assume the credit of research upon materials which are found to hand in some German book. There may also be some who do nothing more than translate, and pass themselves off as authors. The following account will show that the converse may be true;—that a German may translate scores of pages, one after another, from an English writer, and present them as his own. The theft is eight years old, but it is not likely that such a thing should be noticed immediately in England; and, moreover, it is desirable it should be known that lapse of time does not spell impunity. The owner in this case is Mr. J. R. Young; the appropriator is Dr. C. H. Schnuse; then of Heidelberg. Mr. Young began writing on the theory of equations in 1823, when he was the first elementary writer who saw the value of what is now current as Horner's method, the great completion of the imperfect labours of Vieta, Briggs, and Newton in the numerical solution of equations. Mr. Young was afterwards the author of a long chain of well-known elementary works, and was for many years professor at Belfast. When the Institution of that place was converted into a Queen's College, he was made to fall to the ground between the two stools, in a manner which he explained at the time in a pamphlet. Belfast is a place of many religious sores. Mr. Young was also unequally used in reference to his retiring pension; but this matter was afterwards righted by the Government, and, we believe, arrears were paid. We remember this by the opposition made by some honourable member, who rather suspected that a Belfast payment must be a job. The following dialogue ensued:—

Hon. Member.—Is Mr. Young a professor of theology?

Current Minister.—No! of mathematics.

Hon. Member.—I withdraw my opposition.

Mr. Young, who has written largely on the theory of equations, published his "Algebraical Equations of the higher order" in 1843. Dr. Schnuse published his "Theorie der höhen Algebraischen und der Transcendenten Gleichungen," at Brunswick, in 1850. We have not troubled ourselves to reckon how much more than 100 pages, or less than 300, are taken from Mr. Young's book. We dip into the chapter on Sturm's theorem, and we find page after page, and example after example, as in Young: not merely the method and examples transcribed, but the intermediate paragraphs. Thus, having finished one example (Young, p. 242; Schnuse, p. 180), they both start off into the same other example in the following way:—

Young.

We shall now give an example that will in some measure illustrate the preceding observations.

Schnuse.

Wir wollen diese allgemeinen Bemerkungen gleichsam noch durch ein Beispiel erläutern.

And so on to the end of the chapter. We amused ourselves by finding out how a person without any German might detect the copying. By the examples, of course: the Arabic numerals are common to both nations. But at the end of this chapter the English reader sees that the method of Fourier has a practical value, while at the end of the German this same English reader catches sight of Fourier's schöne Methode and Praktischen Werth. Then, in the first sentence of the next chapter, on Horner's method, the English eye may still see something in the German text:—

Young.

The method of approximation to the real roots of numerical equations to be discussed in the present chapter, is that which was first proposed by Mr. Horner, and published by him in the Philosophical Transactions, in the year 1819.

Schnuse.

Die methode zur näherungsweise Berechnung der realen Wurzeln der Zahlengleichungen welche wir in diesem Kapitel auseinanderzusetzen wollen, rührt von Horner her, welcher sie im Jahre 1819 in den Philosophical Transactions veröffentlicht hat.

Then follows many and many a page of examples and illustrations common to both writers. Dr. Schnuse mentions Mr. Young's name in reference to another matter, at the end of the work: alluding to him, not as a writer, but as the inventor of a method.

The facetious Hierocles tells the story of a man who, having a house to sell, carried about a brick as a specimen. The bricks of which books are built are specimens; and seldom is it that two or three bricks are piled together in two different books in exactly the same way, by nothing but coincidence. The same ideas often strike different persons fairly; it is very rare indeed that the same sentence occurs to both, if of ten or fifteen words. It has been noted that Terence says, I præ, sequar, and that some modern dramatists have hit on, Go before, I'll follow. This is, perhaps, nearly the utmost extent to which different writers fall on the same collocations of words : four, five, or six at a time.

The unscrupulous man whom we have exposed might have been an honourable translator ; he has chosen to be a dishonourable translator. We dismiss him with the remark that he has added one to the number of inconvertible identities : Schnuse is German for Young, but Young is not English for Schnuse.—Athenæum, 5th March, 1859, p. 321.

SCOTT (Sir Walter) Bart.

The following works have been falsely, or fraudulently with intent to deceive, attributed to England's greatest novelist. The reader will look in vain for them in Lockhart's Life of Sir W. Scott :

The Lay of the Scottish Fiddle, a tale of Havre de Grace. Supposed to be written by Walter Scott Esq. First American from the fourth Edinburgh Edition. New York, 1813. [By James Kirke Paulding.]

The Bridal of Caölchairn, and Miscellaneous Poems. By Sir Walter Scott, Bart. 5th edition, London, Hurst & Co. and Edinburgh, Constable, 1822, 8vo. [By J. H. Allan.]

"This pretended '5th edition' differs in the title-page only from the first edition [same year], bearing the name of the real author, J. H. Allan."—Note in B. M. Cat.

Die Erstürmung von Selama, oder die Rache. Eine schottische Sage von Walter Scott. 3 thle, Quedlinburg und Leipzig, 1825.

Walladmor. Frei nach dem Englischen des Walter Scott, von W . . . s, 3 bde., Berlin, F. A. Herbig, 1824. [By G. W. H. Haering, known in Germany under the pseudonym, Willibald Alexis].

"James Ballantyne's satisfaction went on increasing as the MS. flowed in upon him ; and he at last pronounced The Talisman such a masterpiece that The Betrothed might venture abroad under its wing. Sir Walter was now reluctant on that subject, and said he would rather write two more new novels than the few pages necessary to complete his unfortunate Betrothed. But while he hesitated, the German newspapers announced "A new Romance by the Author of Waverley" as about to issue from the press of Leipzig. There was some ground for suspecting that some of the suspended sheets might have been purloined and sold to a pirate, and this consideration put an end to his scruples. And when the German did publish the fabrication entitled Walladmor, it could no longer be doubtful that some reader of Scott's sheets had communicated at least the fact that he was breaking ground in Wales."—Lockhart's Life of Scott.

Walladmor : "Freely translated into German from the English of Sir Walter Scott," and now freely translated from the German into English. In 2 vols, London, printed for Taylor and Hessey, 1825.

This fabrication which is full of gross anachronisms, was translated into French [by A. J. B. Defauconpret] from the English version. Paris, 1825, 3 vols. A long account will be found in the Lond. Magazine, x. 353 (says Bohn's Lowndes which gives the title incorrectly from that journal.) It seems Sir Walter did not supply novels in sufficient numbers for the German appetite, or else they were too expensive for the frugal German pockets. At all events here is another by the same author, who is still living :—

Chalcographimania, or the Portrait Collector and Print-seller's Chronicle, with infatuations of every description. A humorous poem. R. S. Kirby, 1814. Dedicated to James Bindley, and dated from Cambridge.

Thomas Hartwell Horne, in his Introduction to the Study of Bibliography, p. 521, says: The deserved popularity of the Bibliomania

(by T. F. Dibdin) suggested to some anonymous writer the idea of satirizing the mania for prints in a volume. . . . Of this the less is said the better. The poem is anything but humorous, and to the notes may justly be applied the author's motto Caeoethes Carpendi: it is throughout tinctured with malevolence. The cut prefixed purports to be copied from an unique print of Will Somers, the jester, which has no existence!

Lowndes says that it was written from information mostly furnished by T. Coram. If it was written by Ireland, it seems strange that the following verses should occur:—

In autographs as ably vers'd,
As Chatterton the poet erst;
Or he that later wielded fire-brand,
The impudent and forging Ireland.—p. 35.

He is led to mention this from the circumstance of some other writer having assumed the same signature about a twelvemonth, more or less, after he had adopted it; and forthwith prefixed it to sundry publications of his own. He would also deprecate, could he think it necessary, the supposition that he could have meant by such title to imply any sort of pretensions as regards the peculiar qualifications for learned research."

Sir Egerton Brydges is a gentleman well known to be devoted to literature,—and now a traveller, who may emphatically be said to drag at each remove a lengthening chain. It has also happened to us lately to be travellers, and wherever we went we found vestiges of Sir Egerton,—remnants of his mind, in the shape of English books, printed in foreign parts, for the benefit, we presume, of the natives. At Geneva, early last year, we encountered Sir Egerton's volume on Political Economy, with Packhous's imprint—drawn from our countryman, no doubt, by his breathing the same air with Sismondi. At Florence he had dropped a volume of tales and poetry. In the autumn we were at Rome, and heard from our valet de place, as his first piece of news, that Sir Brydges had established a printing press in the eternal city, under the protection of a cardinal. At Naples, almost the first book we met with was the work, the title of which stands at the head of this notice, and which is the commencing number of a series, which the Chevalier Du Pont (as Sir Egerton Brydges was called at Paris) intends perseveringly to continue, unless he should be stopped by an invasion or an eruption. Every man has his hobby, says Sterne ; a printing press seems to be Sir Egerton's :—but that he should go abroad to print and publish English books, is surely strange! His ambition was once to "witch the world" with smart volumes "from the private press at Lee Priory;" but as if a private press in his own country was not sufficiently secluded from the interference of the impertinent curiosity of readers, he has now allowed his love of obscurity as an author to carry him away to strangers altogether,—amongst whom he may reasonably hope to be able to print and publish once a month or oftener, without running any very imminent hazard of having his modest pages rumped or fluttered by the eagerness of perusal.—Blackwood's Mag., Feb., 1821.

SHAKESPEARE (William).

The spurious or doubtful plays of Shakespeare occupy six closely printed columns in the new edition of Lowndes by H. G. Bohn, to which we refer the reader.

It is not often that we have occasion to praise this work, nor have we been much indebted to it. The bibliogram on Shakespeare is really so thoroughly worked up, that we have very great pleasure in testifying to its usefulness; and whenever we mention Shakespeare, if further information is required, Lowndes by Bohn should be referred to.

SIDNEY (Edward William) ps. [BEVERLY TUCKER].

The Partisan Leader ; a tale of the future. Printed for the publishers by James Caxton, 1836, 2 vols.

SURREBUTTER (John) Esq., phren. [JOHN ANSTEY, son of the author of the celebrated "New Bath Guide"].

The Pleader's Guide, a didactic poem, in two books, containing the conduct of a Suit at Law, with the Arguments of Counsellor Bother'um and Counsellor Bore'um in an action betwixt John-a-Gull and John-a-Gudgeon. By the late —, Special Pleader.

This witty little poem which contains so many hits at the author's own profession, has been frequently reprinted since 1796.

Lord Campbell, in his Lives of the Justices, quotes these lines:—

Three years I sat his smoky room in,
Pens, paper, ink, and pounce consuming.

And observes that "Tom Tewkesbury" was the Hero of the Guide, which he thinks has become almost unintelligible, from the changes in our legal procedure. The noble lord relates that he had heard Professor Porson, at the Cider Cellars, in Maiden Lane, now no more, recite the whole from memory, and that he concluded by relating that when buying a copy of it, and complaining that the price was very high, the bookseller said, "Yes, Sir, but you know Law-Books are always very dear."

TERNAUX-COMPANS (Henri).

Catalogue des livres et MSS. de la bibliothèque de feu M. Rætzel. Paris, 1836.

When this gentleman wished to dispose of a portion of his curious collections, he took a fancy to be enigmatic on the occasion, and part was offered for sale as the property of a fictitious Englishman, Mr. Riddell, and part as the property of a fictitious German, Herr Rætzel. "Räthsel" in German is the equivalent of "riddle" in English, and the riddle has remained a riddle to many bibliographers to this day. The Athenæum, from whose number for March, 1860, we take this, gives an instance of a very learned German bibliograph, Dr. Graesse, being thus misled. As he more than once in his Trésor des Livres Rares, etc., quotes the prices at the sale of "M. Rætzel." This last is mentioned by Harris in his Bib. Americana, 1866. THE AUTHOR OF Lady Audley's Secret [Miss BRADDON].

The Doctor's Wife, London, 1864. Aurora Floyd. Henry Dunbar, 1864. Sir Jasper's Tenant, 1864. See Lascelles (Lady C.) pseud.

The opening chapters of Lady Audley's Secret were first published anonymously in Robin Goodfellow, a journal conducted by Charles Mackay, in 1861. It ceased at the twelfth number. Four octavo pages of the latter, in double columns, make 24 pages in the three volume reprint, in which the fact of its having previously appeared is not mentioned.

Henry Dunbar, the Story of an Outcast. By the Author of Lady Audley's Secret. Maxwell & Co., 1864.

On the publication of this work the "Athenæum" made the following remarks :

"The Publication of a new novel by Miss Braddon seems to bring, as a matter of course, a renewal of the old puffery. We shall take the liberty of telling all parties concerned that the thing is over done. People are growing suspicious of books which begin—as far as they can see—with a second edition."

This novel was first published in a serial form in the London Journal in 1864, under the title of "The Outcast," though this fact is not mentioned in the re-issue. With regard to the second edition being the first, the latter was doubtless a very small one, and this may not unjustly be considered as part of the "puffing system," which we by no means condemn, if carried on honestly. A certain amount of puffing for an unknown writer is necessary to bring him into notice ; but our readers may judge for themselves of the following paragraph, sent by the publishers of the novel to the "Athenæum" for publication :

"Henry Dunbar—The publishers state that the whole of the 1st edition of this new novel, by the author of 'Lady Audley's Secret' has been completely exhausted on the first day of publication ; and that a second edition is in the press, and will be ready on Monday next. Admirers of Miss Braddon's prolific pen have much cause to rejoice in her popularity, the growth of which is now made more manifest than ever by the simultaneous issue of her writings in the French, German, and English languages, etc."

Mr. Maxwell has the sanction of the law for this proceeding :—"the Vice-Chancellor apprehended that if a publisher chose to print 20,000 copies, keeping in his storehouse a large quantity, and periodically issuing them to the world, by thousands, for instance, every such issue would be an edition."—Reule v. Bentley, Phillips, p. 73.

Discipline. A Novel. Edin., 1814. Lond., 1847.

The authoress began writing this in 1812, the year in which Waverley burst upon the novel world. In a letter, she says of her work:—

“It is very unfortunate in coming after Waverley, by far the most splendid exhibition of talent in the novel way which has appeared since the days of Fielding and Smollett. There seems little doubt that it comes from the pen of Scott. What a competitor for poor little me! The worst of all is, that I have ventured unconsciously on Waverley’s own ground, by carrying my heroine to the Highlands!”

“Till I began Self-Control [1814] I had never in my life written anything but a letter or a receipt, excepting a few hundreds of vile rhymes, from which I desisted by the time I had gained the wisdom of fifteen years; therefore I was so ignorant of the art on which I was entering, that I formed scarcely any plan for my tale. I merely intended to show the power of the religious principle in bestowing self-command, and to bear testimony against a maxim as immoral as indelicate, that a reformed rake makes the best husband.”—Mary Brunton to Joanna Baillie.

Numerous pieces under this pseudonym.

In an excellent article in that very excellent English Cyclopædia, of the enterprising Charles Knight, on the British Museum, it is stated that Uncle Tom's Cabin has been translated into Armenian, and "It may be worth while to mention that advantage has been taken (at the British Museum) of the polyglot popularity of Uncle Tom's Cabin to afford students an opportunity, not otherwise procurable, of studying the colloquial and familiar idiom of different countries. Versions have been procured in almost every European language; and there are some Welsh and Wallachian, for instance, in which there are double or triple versions of this particular book, while there is hardly a double version of any other except the Bible."

Bee-Keeping. By —, &c. 1864.

The result of some letters written by Dr. Cumming in the Times, which caused a great deal of controversy at the time.

'Bee-Keeping' is one of the most remarkable specimens of book-making which we have met with for a long time. The author, Dr. Cumming, sent to the Times an account of a successful honey harvest about the end of July last (1864). This led to various inquiries by different writers addressed to that journal, which, having been forwarded to the 'Bee-Master,' a series of six other letters on bees and wasps was subsequently published. . . . They occupy 50 pages of the volume before us, which consists of 224. . . . All this was written, printed, and published, with a number of woodcuts, by the end of September!" The writer (in the Athenæum) concludes by saying that it is "an amusing addition to the bibliography of the hive."

THORNBURY (George Walter).

The Life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. Founded on Letters and Papers published by his friends and fellow Academicians. Lond., Hurst, &c., 1862.

MR. THORNBURY'S "LIFE OF TURNER."

(To the Editor of the Athenæum.) *

Hutton, Brentwood, Dec. 2, 1861.

"Turner hated plagiarism," says Mr. Thornbury in his recently published life of our great landscape painter (vol. ii. p. 256); and he endeavours to show, in no very graceful terms, in his preface, that plagiarism in literature is as repugnant to his feelings as a man of letters, as plagiarism in art was to the artist. "Mr. Timbs," remarks the biographer, "with little of that courtesy which should distinguish literary men, plying his scissors with his usual industry, has lately cut out a dozen or two of trite or erroneous Turner stories, and published them in a catchpenny form, for which—as partly fulfilling Job's wish—I thank him."

I may very fairly exclaim with Gratiano, "I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word"; for Mr. Thornbury has plied his scissors on a short memoir of Turner of mine with a prodigality that seems almost incredible. Mr. Timbs, the prolific compiler, publishes his Turner stories as a compilation. Mr. Thornbury prints all the best of my Turner stories, scattered over many pages, as his own. In the last edition of Turner's "Rivers of France," published in 1853, by Mr. Bohn, there is a memoir of the artist by Mr. Alaric Watts, in which is included six pages of extracts from my memoir, with honourable mention of me as the author. I need only refer to Mr. Watts's extracts, because it is from these that Mr. Thornbury has helped himself. Out of the six pages (p. xlii. to xlviii.) containing them, he has appropriated three; the contents appear in vol. i. pp. 67 and 198-199, and in vol. ii. pp. 130-131, 141, 161, 217-218 and 318. The first extract Mr. Thornbury takes the trouble to re-write:—

Reeve, 1851.

Thornbury, 1861.

"He would walk through portions of England, twenty to five miles a day, with his baggage twenty-five miles a day, with his little modicum of baggage at the end of a stick, sketching rapidly on his way all striking pieces of composition, and marking effects with a power that daguerrotyped them in his mind. There were few moving phenomena in clouds or shadows which he did not fix indelibly in his memory."

Reeve, 1851.

Thornbury, 1861.

tied up in a handkerchief, and swinging on the end of a stick. He sketched quickly all the good pieces of composition he met. He made quick pencil notes in his pocket-book, and photographed into his mind legions of transitory effects by aid of a stupendous, retentive, and minute memory."

Mr. Thornbury, thinking probably that my style was now sufficiently elegant for his purpose, lays down the pen for the scissors. His next extract, commencing "An intimate friend, while travelling in the Jura," vol. i. p. 198-199, is printed verbatim. The next cutting is manipulated with the skill of an accomplished penny-a-liner. It occupies an entire page of Mr. Thornbury's work, vol. ii. pp. 130-131, commencing "One element in Turner's success was his indifference to praise," and ending "He felt keenly the ignorant criticisms and ridicule with which his own pictures were sometimes treated." The ingenuity exercised to give originality to this paragraph consists in half a dozen lines in one part of it being printed between turned commas, and attributed to Mr. Peter Cunningham! The fourth extract, p. 141, commencing "He never would tell his birthday," is printed verbatim. Of the next interpolated paragraph, p. 161, commencing "He wrote few letters," I have less to complain of. Mr. Thornbury does not print this, similar to the rest, as his own, but, like a vast number of other collectanea in his book, between turned commas, without acknowledgment or reference. The next extract occupies an entire page, p. 217-218, and is printed, also, verbatim; it commences, "Turner was always on the alert for any remarkable effects," and ends, "in which the great artist's attention had been caught by the hissing and puffing and glowing fire of the locomotive." The seventh and last clause in my indictment against Mr. Thornbury is a short one; and as it is altered I must ask permission to give it entire:—

Reeve, 1851.

"There is yet another portrait to record: Mr. Charles Turner, A.R.A., the mezzotint engraver of his Liber Studiorum, and his oldest and most constant friend, was so desirous of securing a likeness of him, that he offered to pay Sir Thomas Lawrence, or any other artist that Turner should name, if he would only consent to sit, but he was not to be prevailed upon. Mr. C. Turner was, how-

Thornbury, 1861.

"There is yet another portrait to record. Mr. Charles Turner, A.R.A., the mezzotint engraver of his Liber Studiorum, and his oldest and most constant friend, was so desirous of securing a likeness of him at all hazards, that he availed himself from time to time of every opportunity of collecting memoranda for the purpose. He at length obtained a most characteristic portrait in oil, small, ever, determined to have a likeness of him at all hazards, and availed himself from time to time of every opportunity of collecting memoranda for the purpose. He at length obtained a most characteristic portrait in oil, small, half-size, in the act of sketching. The singularity of his dress and figure have been scrupulously attended to, and it has been pronounced an admirable and faithful likeness. It will be gratifying to Turner's friends to know that Mr. C. Turner intends to engrave the portrait."

half-size, in the act of sketching. The singularity of his dress and figure have been scrupulously attended to, and it has been pronounced an admirable and faithful likeness. I believe that Mr. C. Turner engraved this portrait."

If anything were needed to show the worthlessness of Mr. Thornbury's "Life of Turner," it is the unnecessary appropriation of this passage. One would think that a chapter devoted especially to "The Turner Portraits," about which so much curiosity prevails, would be at least marked by some research. But Mr. Thornbury cuts out my paragraph in all its detail, as related to me by Charles Turner himself, bad grammar—a common failing with Mr. Thornbury (here printed in Italic)—included; and having run his pen through the rash assertion of the engraver, that he had offered to give a commission to Sir Thomas Lawrence, winds up simply with the remark, "I believe that Mr. C. Turner engraved this portrait." Mr. Thornbury, perceiving in my statement of ten years ago that Mr. C. Turner intended to engrave it, assumes that he did engrave it. By happy accident, in no way, however, due to Mr. Thornbury's research, he has hit the mark; for on the death of Charles Turner, about three years ago, the secret came to light, at the sale of his effects, as every diletanti knows, of his having engraved this portrait as long back, apparently, as twenty years before. What criticism, then, can be too strong to denounce Mr. Thornbury's random assertion, "I believe Mr. Charles Turner engraved this portrait"? A print from this plate, which it is suspected the sly engraver destroyed, may be seen at Mr. Graves', the eminent publisher of Pall Mall.

My memoir of Turner, it may be added, was drawn up from viva voce information imparted to me by some of the great artist's most intimate friends within three days of his decease,—Mr. Charles Turner, one of his executors, and Mr. Leslie, both of whom have since followed him to the grave; Mr. Windus, and others.

Speaking of dear old John Britton, the well-known author of many beautiful works of vast and original research on the Cathedrals of England—a man whose memory is cherished by every true-hearted antiquary with homage and respect—Mr. Thornbury says (vol. ii. p.

151)—“There is a story told of Turner’s love of concealment, which connects him with Britton, the publisher of so many architectural works; a plausible and, I fear, a very mean man; one of those bland, selfish squeezers of other men’s brains that still occasionally disgrace literature.” To whom should this scandalous observation be addressed? I trust that some new biographer of Turner will arise, to board this piratical craft, and rescue the valuable freight which the painter’s bosom friends have committed to its keeping. It must be painful, indeed, to these gentlemen, to Mr. Trimmer, and to Mr. Ruskin especially, to find their precious reminiscences mixed up with such an unlettered commentary. How light the manner, how flippant the treatment, how utterly unworthy of a great subject!

LOVELL REEVE.

It may be as well to observe that Mr. Thornbury in no way spares other writers in his criticisms: will any one, twenty years hence, quote Mr. Thornbury’s own words in regard to himself:—“Tawdry rubbish—now all but forgotten, and soon to sink deep in the mud-pool of oblivion.”

Mr. Thornbury’s preface is good—indeed, we believe he never writes anything badly, but it reminds us of Dr. Johnson, who wrote capital prefaces to works which, if he ever read, he never wrote. It is written in his richest style, redolent with word-painting: he uses adjectives in the happiest manner. Unfortunately this use of adjectives is apt to lead a writer from dry facts; and the above “Life” appears to have got him into a little trouble, for the details of which we must refer to the Athenæum, 1861, vol. ii, where Mr. Masson complains of Mr. Thornbury’s disrespect (p. 808), “Inventions about Turner,” from Mr. Henry M’Connel (848)—“Turner and Girtin,” a refutation from Mr. W. H. Carpenter, Keeper of the Prints and Drawings at the British Museum; 1862, vol. i., p. 19—from Mr. John Pye, and (296, 331)—from Mr. Henry Elliot (G. Lewis, 334), all complaining.

A captious letter from Mr. Thornbury in the number for 22nd February, 1862, leaves him in a worse light than if he had been silent. We therefore omit it. He ends by saying that “no falsehood and no intentional plagiarism shall ever stain a single page I write,” which probably referred to the future, for “The Life of Turner” disproves these words.

Mr. Thornbury, amongst other works, has written “The Monarchs of the Main, 1855.” In the preface to this he claims at least “originality,” which seems to consist, according to his own account, in his having taken it, more or less, from three other works, without, as Professor De Morgan somewhere remarks, any evidence being left as to whether it is more or less. The same observations will apply to the University of Cambridge. By T. Lund. Lond., Spottiswoode, 1858.

An Answer to Mr. Lund's Attack on Mr. Todhunter. Cambridge, Palmer, 1858.

The copyright of Wood's work having expired, it is public property, so far as law is concerned. Mr. Lund in his pamphlet proves that Mr. Todhunter has taken, without acknowledgment, what he had a legal right to take, to the extent of under one-thirtieth of his whole book.

Mr. Todhunter admits the charge, but defends his course on the ground that Wood is so well known that any use made of him would at once be recognised, that the omission was out of consideration for Mr. Lund.

But, as the writer in the Athenæum, from whence we take this note (1858, ii. 81, 110), observes, a person already in possession of Wood, and wishes to have another author, would be grossly deceived if he bought the same under another name: he adds that there is a very lax view of such things taken at Cambridge, and instances a case, but, we regret to say, gives no names.

The pamphlet upon "The Aristocracy of England" is announced as the first of a series. . . . The publisher is one of the regular agents for that system of societies, of which the eldest assumed the title of "The Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge," and the latest has not feared to proclaim itself "The Society for the Diffusion of Political Knowledge." The founder and president of all these ultra-philanthropic societies is Henry Lord Brougham and Vaux; and common report has ascribed to his lordship's versatile pen the pages which his lordship's agent, Mr. Hooper, has just published as the production of "Isaac Tomkins, Gentleman."

We have, from internal evidence, no sort of doubt that the public report is in this instance correct.—Quarterly Review, liii. 540.

Letters written on Board His Majesty's Ship the Northumberland, and at St. Helena, in which the conduct and conversations of Napoleon Bonaparte and his suite during the voyage, and the first months of his residence in that island, are faithfully described and related. By —. Lond., published for the Author [1816]. 8vo.

Cursory Remarks on the Article in the Edinburgh Review relative to Mr. Warden's Letters from St. Helena [Lond ?], 1817. Signed "Waterloo."

"...That which is best known in England are the letters of Mr. Warden, who has been made (we will not say the innocent, but) the ignorant tool of the cabal. Our readers will recollect that in our review of this man's work [xvi. 208] we ventured to assert—1st, that no such letters were ever written; and 2d, that Mr. Warden only brought home with him certain notes of conversations with Buonaparte and his followers of which the tone and substance were made to fit, not the truth of the facts, but the object which Buonaparte had to accomplish.

These suspicions have been fully realized.—Mr. Warden, though he affects in an advertisement to a new edition of his work to take notice of our animadversions, does not venture to affirm that such letters ever were written. He confesses indeed that he employed a literary man to correct his work, but alleges that this person added nothing of his own: but we repeat it, he does not and he cannot deny that the character of letters written from St. Helena, which was intended to give authority to and to vouch for the authenticity of his work, is false, and that the whole foundation and substance of his apology for Buonaparte (for such it is) was information given him by that person and his followers, and given by them for the purpose of publication.

We have been informed that when Mr. Warden had left St. Helena, it was well known to all the French that he was carrying home notes for publication: and that, on the arrival of a ship from England which brought newspapers and books, Buonaparte heedlessly asked if Warden's book was come. Unluckily, Mr. Warden's book was only published in London about the time when Buonaparte asked the question, and was not known at St. Helena for six weeks after. Whether it was by Buonaparte's desire that Warden gave his publication the shape in which we see it, or whether the surgeon acted from a natural tendency to sophistication, we cannot pretend to say, —it is enough for us to repeat, that his book is a gross imposition; the substance of which are the falsehoods of Las Cases and Buonaparte, and the shape of which is the fabrication of the anonymous editor."—Quarterly Review, xvi. 486.

* Letters from the Cape of Good Hope, in reply to Mr. Warden; with Extracts from the great work now compiling for publication under the inspection of Napoleon. 1817; 8vo; 206.

It is just as we expected—and our readers will have been prepared by the ninth article of our thirty-second number for this publication. We have here another of the series of tricks with which Buonaparte endeavours to keep himself alive in the recollection of Europe. It is, like all the rest, fraudulent in its title, shape, and pretensions; false in its facts; and jacobinical in its object. But it has this claim to consideration beyond its predecessors, that it comes from a source so nearly connected with Buonaparte as to give it in some degree the authority of being his own apology made by himself. It tells us, indeed, little or nothing in the way of fact that is not familiar to our readers; but it speaks in a more decisive tone—it shows by the subjects on which it attempts its apologies whereabouts (to use a vulgar phrase) the shoe pinches; and it proves by the futility of them . . .

We have said that the very form of this publication is fraudulent. The author has, in this particular, closely imitated Mr. Warden. It pretends to be a series of Letters: no such letters were ever written. It is addressed to a Dear Lady C——: the Dear Lady C—— is not in existence. It affects to be originally written in English: it was written in French, and the pretended original is only a translation; and to crown the whole, the author assumes the character of an Englishman, while in fact he is a Frenchman, and no other, we are satisfied, than the notorious Count de las Cases, of whose veracity and honour our readers have already had some tolerable specimens.

We shall not waste much time in explaining the ear-marks by which (in addition to their own solemn and repeated assertions to the contrary) we recognize these Letters to be a translation from the French. The most careful and adroit translator cannot always escape the intrusive treachery of gallicisms: but every page of this work abounds with them; half a dozen out of as many hundreds will more than suffice to convince our readers.

The facts, or rather, the falsehoods, might indeed have been put together by Montholon, or any other of the clique; but the style of the pamphlet, and several circumstances connected with Las Cases, leave, as we have said, little doubt in our minds that he is, immediately or remotely, the author of it. But, whoever be the writer, it must be considered as coming from Buonaparte himself; and assured, as we are, that it is derived from him, and published, if not with his knowledge, at least in concurrence with his wishes, we shall persist in considering it as the apology of the ex-emperor dictated by himself.

Our readers will have observed that the work is entitled “a Reply to Mr. Warden.” We find in the outset a complete substantiation of our charges against that person.

But though this work is thus announced as a reply to Mr. Warden, our readers will smile to hear that there is hardly one substantial contradiction of his statements; in fact the book is merely a postscript to Warden’s, repeating all his apologies for Buonaparte, but with greater care and skill—softening down passages which had excited indignation—strengthening points which had been found weak—reconciling contradictions which had been detected—supplying eulogies and panegyrics upon themselves which had been omitted—and, in short, publishing Mr. Warden’s letters as Buonaparte and Las Cases originally intended that they should have been published by him.—Quarterly Review, 1817, xvii. 507, et seq.

Allowance must be made for the political bias of the reviewer.

"Doubtless suggested to Lord Byron his disreputable poem of Don Juan."—Allibone. Frequently reprinted.

WHITE (Babington) pseudonym: plagiarist.

The plagiarism committed by "Mr. B. White" is in a novel first published in a serial form in Belgravia, a monthly magazine, of which Miss Braddon is "conductor," and Mr. Maxwell proprietor. No sooner was "Circe" republished in the usual form by Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Tyler, the publishers, than the press exposed the plagiarism. The Pall Mall Gazette of the 16th September, 1867, in an article entitled "Dalila" and "Circe," after noting that "Dalila," by M. Octave Feuillet, was published in 1855, gave parallel passages, which completely proved the theft from "Dalila":

"Even the title of the English book is due to a suggestion of M. Feuillet: 'Omphale, CIRCE Dalila! ces noms de magiciennes qui flamboient comme des phares dans la tradition du monde, comment ne m'ont-ils pas éclairé?' One can fancy the English author divided between the merits of the titles "Omphale" and Circé, and ultimately deciding in favour of the shorter one; especially as there could be little question about the method of pronouncing it—'Omphale' suggesting difficulties of quantity to many. And then the author has had the effrontery here and there to head his chapters with garbled quotations from the French work, taking care of course to suppress all mention of the source of his extracts!

"The crying offence of the book, however, is its absolute dishonesty. Its adapter is simply attempting to palm off upon the English public as an original novel a book stolen from the French, altered in some respects, lengthened and much maltreated altogether, but with its origin still clearly to be traced by those who will trouble themselves to examine into the matter. We claim a right to protest against a proceeding so fraudulent. In all cases of adaptation—let it be a play from a play, as 'The Streets of London,' from 'Les Pauvres des Paris'—or a play from a novel, as 'Still Waters Run Deep,' from 'Le Gendre'—or a novel from a novel, as 'The Doctor's Wife,' from 'Madame Bovary,' and 'Circé' from 'Dalila'—it is the merest justice that the obligation to the foreign and original author should be publicly acknowledged and formally placed upon record."

The very severe remarks made by the Pall Mall Gazette excited much controversy.

A letter appeared the next day (17th Sept.) signed "M. E. Braddon," expressing regret that she should have been imposed upon. This letter, Miss Braddon wrote to say, was a forgery. In addition to this, she offered to add 100 guineas to any reward the Pall Mall Gazette might offer for the discovery of the forger. The Pall Mall Gazette declined to offer any reward, and thus placed itself in a false position; and general opinion, we believe, considered that it was wrong in not carrying out Miss Braddon's proposal.

The Spectator wrote upon the subject, and its remarks were commented upon in the Pall Mall Gazette of the 28th Sept., 1867. In the same number it also published an advertisement extracted from a Dutch newspaper, of "A new novel of Miss Braddon's, derived from the French of Octave Feuillet, by Babington White."

This, Miss Braddon contended, was spurious. - The London Review (Oct. 5), in an article entitled "Miss Babington," plainly said it believed this to be another of Miss Braddon's pseudonyms. -

We will conclude with one or two passages from an article entitled "Good-Natured Criticism" in the Pall Mall Gazette :—

"Not for the purpose of recurring to the particulars of the significant 'Circé' business, but to show how the regular manufacture of such productions is fostered by good-natured critics, do we notice the matter now. The case itself is thoroughly and indisputably bad. The author of the imposture was not indebted to a contemporary writer for an idea or a situation merely—what he did was to steal by wholesale—plot and language, body and bones. And (this is particularly significant) he plundered on system, and where one author failed fastened on another. Having exhausted Feuillet, he turns to Balzac, for instance, and ekes out the incidents of his second volume by a scene taken bodily from that writer's 'Chef d'Œuvre Inconnu.' The story produced in this artistic way was printed in a magazine generally considered to be respectable. It was afterwards republished, and the publisher announced by advertisement that it had won the favourable opinion of the Edinburgh Review." [Mr. Maxwell had struck out the word "Daily" in the Edinburgh Daily Review, a practise which he defended in a letter to the Morning Star. See P. M. G. Sept. 27th.] "This was dishonesty heaped upon dishonesty. The Edinburgh Review had no more noticed the story than Mr. Babbington White had invented it. That person unknown had filched from M. Feuillet, from Balzac, from Heaven knows whom beside, and his publisher ticketed the stolen goods with a false warranty. Is there nothing reprehensible in that—nothing deserving of exposure and reprobation? One would think so who cared to maintain the integrity of literary men as a body, to elevate, and not yet further to degrade, the standard of literature, and to expose the tricks of unscrupulous traders. It seems, however, that opinion may differ even upon such a matter as this; that the offences we have permitted ourselves to make known, though acknowledgedly indefensible, are yet not such as a discreet critic would notice with asperity; in fact, that asperity in such a case is itself improper, and subject to suspicions of private malice. Nor is this view of the matter held only by shoddy novel writers themselves, nor by those who employ them, nor by such journals as are governed by the golden rule, 'Never offend a publisher.'"

"... It [the manufacture of novels] is founded on the beautiful modern principle of division of labour, and this is the method of it. You catch a literary man who has failed in making either a reputation or a fortune in writing stories. He must, however, have some literary skill, and the sort of invention which in one chapter blows up all the characters in a steamboat, and in the next brings them down miraculously escaped. He must be facile in French, and have a good acquaintance with novels in that language. To these novels, guided by his own fancy, if he happen to have any, he goes for ideas, situations, plots complete; and then, at hack pay, sketches out his work, and fills it in, to the best of his ability. The work is now ready for an 'eminent hand.' A touch here by the eminent hand, a touch there, a chapter rewritten, an incident subordinated, a scene heightened—behold your new novel, turned out with the rapidity of machine work, and with about as much pretension to be 'English literature.' 'Favourable notices' can always be got from journals of the starved apothecary stamp, and the trade pays. Of course we know what the observation 'upon that will be: Michael Angelo painted pictures on a similar plan, and Alexandre Dumas is said to have fabricated his romances in like manner. But there is a distinction between a combination of various kinds and degrees of skill, and a conspiracy to blend into a new shape selected plunder from the produce of other people's skill; and this distinction is one which cannot be bridged by the most-good-natured criticism in the world. However, we only refer to the existence of this new branch of industry as an additional reason for giving no encouragement to industrials of Mr. White's order, and to show that there are general as well as particular reasons for objecting to him. It is upon general grounds that we write now, thinking not so much of one offence as the danger to an already enfeebled literature of tolerating the offenders. Our contemporary the Spectator not only tolerates—it defends them; and we hope we have done no wrong in protesting against the use of its influence in that way.”—Oct. 3, 1867.

A writer in Belgravia, under the pseudonym of Captain Shandon, attempted, in a somewhat coarse and vulgar article, to defend literary piracy, and Mr. G. A. Sala also made some intemperate remarks in an article that might have been excellent if it had advocated a good cause. On both the above the London Review commented in an article entitled “The Knight of Belgravia.” The Pall Mall Gazette vouchsafed no reply: probably considering the tone of the articles too coarse to deserve notice.

See also the Globe, the Evening Star, and several other newspapers during September, October, and November, 1867.

It affords matter for reflection when we find two of the most popular novelists of the day—Miss Braddon and Alexandre Dumas—continually having accusations brought against them of literary supercheries.

WILLS (W. G.)

Having written an exposure of the “hashing up” of novels system, with regard to the novels of Mrs. Henry Wood (q.v.) the Pall Mall Gazette next took a novel called “The Wife’s Evidence” in hand, and called attention to a similar enterprise on the part of Mr. W. G. Wills, its author. “In 1859 Messrs. Hurst and Blackett published a novel called ‘Life’s Foreshadowings.’ A few weeks ago Messrs. Tinsley published a new novel entitled ‘The Love that Kills,’ by W. G. Wills. This book is simply ‘Life’s Foreshadowings’ reproduced. The names of the dramatis personæ are changed, and possibly—for we must own that after closely comparing the first two volumes of both publications we wearied of the task and abandoned it—there may be some variation in the catastrophe ; but otherwise the plot is the same, the scenes are the same, the characters are the same, page after page and chapter after chapter being reprinted verbatim. In a preface to ‘The Love that Kills,’ the author notes down certain objects he had in view in that work ; he is careful, however, to give no hint that he was reproducing an earlier book, which he probably conceived was altogether forgotten.” [It then gives parallel passages.]

“Upon the fairness of this system of publication—and it would really seem to have become a system—it is scarcely necessary to comment. It is to our minds just as culpable as the practice of the dog-fancier who, after selling you a dog, steals it, trims his ears and otherwise disguises him, and then sells him to you again. We may also be permitted to ask how far the publishers of these books are acquainted with their origin, history, and constitution ; for of course the publishers are equally with the author responsible to the public.”

[Mr. Wills’ reply we quote in full.]

To the Editor of the PALL MALL GAZETTE.

Sir,—I beg some space in your paper to reply to a charge which your industrious contributor has preferred against a novel of mine entitled “The Love that Kills.” His attack is short, but contains mis-statement. I beg therefore to offer to your readers the following justification :

1st. The whole bent of the work is altered—the first volume being wholly reconstructed, not “page for page the same,” but full of new matter. The third volume is almost wholly new, containing the rising and rebellion of ’48. In “Life’s Foreshadowings” the leading character is a scientific man, whose end is to discover a certain planet, the presence of which he suspects. In “The Love that Kills,” the leading character is an Irish agitator, who takes part in the rebellion of ’48, from its first rising to its close; and this change is radical throughout the book.

2nd. The material I have employed was taken from an obscure and ephemeral work, my first crude effort, in the three-volume form for which I never received a shilling, and which with the reading public was a failure.

I believe I was thoroughly justified in using such material, and endeavouring to throw it into a readable mould; and also I believe that the work is newer than many a new drama.

In no conceivable way have I wronged my late publishers, Messrs. Hurst and Blackett, who have had from me the best I could offer in literary work.

Finally, I have to exonerate Mr. Tinsley from any knowledge whatsoever of the imported materials in the work, and if there be blame in what I have done, I take the whole responsibility.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

W. G. WILLS.

OUR NAUGHTY NOVELISTS.

II.—MR. W. G. WILLS.

This gentleman is in rather a worse case than Mrs. Wood. In the first place he has not the advantage of being a woman. In the next place he has the extraordinary disadvantage of having “taken in” his publisher as well as the public. Mr. Tinsley informed us yesterday that every line of “The Love that Kills,” when he bought the copy, right was in manuscript; though to give it that marketable appearance Mr. Wills must have copied page after page—whole chapters verbatim—from “Life’s Foreshadowings,” a book which he had already sold to Messrs. Hurst and Blackett. The “explanation” which Mr. Wills favours us with to-day can have no weight, however, with anybody who has had an opportunity of comparing the two books. His own view of the matter is better explained in a second letter (addressed to us), which runs as follows:

To assist your critic in detecting the perfectly new matter in Vol. 1.—apart from reconstruction and the many modifications by which I have endeavoured to obtain story interest—I give the pages herewith:—

„ 17 — 35	„ 146 — 160.
57 — 90	211 — 216.
Making up 82 pages, nearly one-third of volume of absolutely new matter.

This is the best Mr. Wills can say for himself.—Pall Mall Gazette, March 6th, 1867.

[From the Pall Mall Gazette.]

NOT AT ALL A NEW NOVEL.

The rapidity with which certain novelists produce what are called their "works" has long been a matter of astonishment. To write two, three, or four stories a year has become a common achievement, though not so common yet that we have ceased to wonder at the facility of a Braddon or the fertility of a Wood, and to tremble lest the fine brains of those esteemed writers should suffer through their feverish anxiety to keep on amusing, and elevating, and instructing mankind. Never without a pang have we read that a "new novel" from the author of "Lady Audley's Secret" or of "East Lynne" was in the press—confident as we are that those ladies write more than they ought, really. Nor have their best friends been silent on the subject. Again and again have the most favourable critics suggested that such rapid workmanship imperilled the writers' reputation, and must inevitably tell upon their faculties.

But it is not our object now to expatiate upon the inevitable mischief of over production. On the contrary, our glad task is to show that the most fertile novelist may be contemplated without the slightest apprehension that the clever creature is killing herself. It may be, of course, in any particular case, that a constant and abounding efflorescence of genius is tending to early exhaustion. Nevertheless, he is not human who will not rejoice with us in the discovery that there is no necessary connection between producing three novels a year and descent to an early tomb. No, not even in the case of female novelists—of weak woman. Nay, less in their case apparently; a bit of information which will cause every manly breast to swell with satisfaction.

The explanation of all this is curiously simple. There is a modest little domestic virtue known as management—a virtue which has hitherto been thought to culminate in such a revival of cold mutton as will please a palate tolerably dull. It is pre-eminently a female virtue; and, from constant exercise throughout the round of woman's life, is often brought to a high pitch of perfection. Now, strangely enough, it seems never to have occurred to the critics that a quality which in female hands performs wonders in the kitchen, miracles in the wardrobe, may (also in woman's hands) be turned to good account in literature. Nobody seems to have reflected that management, a dexterous dealing with cold characters as with cold mutton, may explain the surprising number of stories which our most admired female novelists turn out. To be sure, we have seen some such suspicion set down in black and white in the case of Miss Braddon lately, but there is a good deal of confusion here; and no adequate idea of what may be done by management in novel-making seems to have been caught. We are fortunate in the discovery of another case, which is not only beautifully clear in itself, but one that may be found to illustrate the whole art and mystery of the matter.

* We have before us two novels. One is 'Lady Adelaide's Oath,' by the Mrs. Henry Wood, a story which is only this month concluded in a London magazine, and which also has just been published as a new novel. The other is the "The Castle's Heir," by Mrs. Henry Wood, published in Philadelphia "from the author's manuscript" five years ago. 'Lady Adelaide's Oath' is issued in three well-printed volumes, for which the public is charged thirty-one shillings and sixpence. 'The Castle's Heir' is published in two volumes at fifty cents apiece; and this "entire new and copyright" work is illustrated into the bargain. No doubt the volumes are stitched in a horrible paper cover; no doubt the work itself is printed in the large-page double-column form which has been hideously vulgarized in England by the 'Mysteries of London,' 'Ada the Betrayed,' and scores of other publications which have been the delight and the destruction of factory girls for a long generation. Moreover, it must be conceded that the illustrations are of the wretchedest kind—of precisely the same character, in fact, as those which appear in our own penny romances, only a little more feeble, a little more vulgar. But consider the difference in the price! Both, be it remarked, are by the same author; and what is more, they are the same story! 'Lady Adelaide's Oath,' the new novel just published by Mr. Bentley, is 'The Castle's Heir,' originally published in Philadelphia five years ago. The plot is the same, the scenes are the same, the characters are the same. There is no difference but the difference which comes of "re-writing"—that is to say, of padding out here, touching up there, curtailing in another place: the padding being by far the most obvious operation.

[The Reviewer here quotes parallel passages].

However, we never intended to enter into any criticism of the story. All we proposed to do we have done, in showing that the wonderfully "fertile resource" and the astonishingly "facile pen" may, in some cases at any rate be explained by a knack of furbishing up old trash and selling it on the strength of a reputation. About the honesty of this mode of business we express no opinion; an admiring public may decide for themselves whether it is fair dealing to pass off to day as a "new novel," a rechauffée of rubbish written for the readers of penny romances years ago. We simply note the fact—and utter the warning. Who will guarantee that Mrs. Wood has not managed her publishers and her public in this way before? Who will undertake to say that she will not attempt the operation again? Here is a story, 'The Castle's Heir,' which was unknown in England till it was re-issued as something else and as quite new. Now we observe that on the title-page of the American edition Mrs. Wood is set down as the author of three other stories which also, we believe, are unknown in England: by which we mean that they are not inscribed under their original titles in the publisher's list of her productions. These are—'Life's Secret,' 'The Mystery,' 'Earl's Heirs.' The question now arises, Have we had these books also under other names? Is 'Life's Secret' "Elster's Folly" perchance? Is "The Mystery" "Oswald Cray?" We have a right to ask these questions—a right which the authoress cannot deny. Should she, happily, be able to answer them in the negative, we may then perhaps venture to demand that those stories shall not be foisted upon the public at any future time as "new novels" by the author of "East Lynne."—Pall Mall Gazette, Feb. 28, 1867.

We have devoted a great deal of space to this matter, as coming under the head of "Literary Frauds" (we are aware the term is severe). If it admitted of more abbreviation, we should have been better pleased; after all, it is a most disagreeable task.

The lady defended herself in a long letter, which revealed some interesting particulars, but, as the reviewer (P. M. G., March 6) observed, left the matter much in the same state. The letter was answered in the same paper. The answer concluded thus:—

"Therewith we dismiss the whole subject, in the enjoyment of a tolerable confidence that Mrs. Wood may think it worth while in future to tell the world whether any work of hers really is new or not. If anything remains to be said it is this: that when a woman takes to writing for the public, she must be dealt with as a writer alone. We must always be sorry when to do justice upon a woman's works is to be severe, but justice must be done all the same."

Waikna ; or, Adventures on the Mosquito Shore. Lond., 1854.

Republished under the title: Adventures on, &c., 1856. It is said that this book was undertaken for a wager to be written, produced, and sold within three weeks, and that by that time its sale exceeded by several thousands the number required.

BERNARD (H. H.) Ph. Dr., allonym [REV. GEORGE SKINNER, of Cambridge].

Cambridge Free Thoughts and Letters on Bibliolatriy, translated from Lessing. Lond., Trubner, 1862.

We have it from authority that Dr. Bernard never wrote one word of this work. It was, in fact, published after his death. We have also been informed that Mr. Skinner had the permission of a relative of Dr. Bernard to use his (Dr. B.'s) name. We do not understand what right the relative had to give the permission. Dr. Hermann Hedwig Bernard was author of The Guide of the Hebrew Student, Lond., 1839, and The Book of Job as Expounded to his Cambridge Pupils, 1864.

BISHOP (Thomas) ps. [HAYES].

Koranzo's Feast ; or the Unfair Marriage. A Tragedy. 1811 ; 4to.

This most extraordinary production (doubtless the work of a madman) was written by one Hayes, a footman to Lord Belgrave. 150 copies were printed, of which more than 130 were burnt at Smeeton's fire. The 16 plates are quite as unique as the text.—M.S. Note by George Daniel, in his own copy.

BOWER (Archibald) plagiarist.

History of the Popes, from the Foundation of the See of Rome to the Present Time, 1748-66. 7 vols, 4to.

Bower and Tillemont Compared ; or the First Volume of the Pretended Original and Protestant History, &c., shewn to be chiefly a translation from a Popish one [Tillemont], with some further particulars relating to the true character and conduct of the translator. . . . By the Author of Six Letters. . . . illustrated [J. Douglas] 1757.

* Dr. Douglas, who exposed the Lauder forgeries, charged Bower with a piece of shameful plagiarism, appropriating to himself the work of De Tillemont, a French historian, without notice or acknowledgment. In order that there might be no mistake, Dr. Douglas printed a few chapters of De Tillemont, page by page, with Bower, and thus triumphantly exposed the fraud. Twenty pamphlets were written in a controversy which followed.

The reader can refer for further particulars to Mr. Lawrence's article (see Biog. Index), to Chalmers' Gen. Biog. Dict. 1812.

GRANT (James), novelist.

Memoirs of James Marquis of Montrose, K.G., Captain-General of Scotland. By James Grant, author of "The Romance of War, etc. With illustrations. Lond., Routledge, 1858; 8vo; viii, 396.

The Athenæum, in showing this work to be little more than a wretched, badly written plagiarism of "Memoirs of Montrose, by Mark Napier," begins with these observations:—"It is time that some inquiry were made into the ethics of cheap publishing. As far as such a movement furnishes (without the infringement of private rights) good literature at a moderate price to the public, every sensible person will give it approbation and encouragement. But is the pretence of cheapness and free use of that favourite term 'the million' to justify practices which are condemned in all trades, and in literature are peculiarly dangerous. Is a dear book, of whatever merit, to be looked on simply as raw material for the manufacture of cheap books?"

"The plain fact is, that Mr. Grant has borrowed from his predecessor all that he dared, and ignored his existence as much as he could."—Part I., 1858, p. 364.

H.

HAMPDEN (John) allonym [LORD NUGENT].

True and Faithful Relation of a Worthy Discourse between Colonel John Hampden and Colonel Oliver Cromwell. Preceded by an Explanatory Preface.

One of those clever imitations of the political and oratorical literature of the 17th century, which could only have been written by one to whom its books and men were familiar, and being put forth (of course anonymously) in the quaint old-faced letter of its period, Lord Nugent took great delight in the success with which he was able, by means of a copy elaborately stained with tobacco-juice, to pass it off upon his uncle, Mr. Thomas Grenville, no indifferent judge of such matters, as a genuine piece of Commonwealth literature.—Memoir, p. lxi. See J. F.

HEINFETTER (Herman) pseud. [PARKER, of Tunbridge Wells.]

This gentleman has been in the habit, for the last twenty years, of putting advertisements over the leader of the Athenæum. They are upon religious controversial subjects, generally being in the form of what, in slang, would be a "poser" for our clergy. He must have spent several hundreds of pounds in these advertisements. No one has turned up with sufficient talent or money to answer him after his own fashion, so Mr. Heinfetter has it pretty nearly all his own way. He always dates from 17, Fenchurch Street.

K.

KIRBY (C.) publisher.

In 1803 Hogg, the publisher, filed a Bill to restrain Kirby from pirating one of his works. It appears that Hogg was proprietor of a work published in monthly numbers, commencing in August, 1802, under the title of "The Wonderful Magazine," by William Granger, Esq., that name being (according to the Bill), as is usual in works of that description, inserted in the title-page, merely as the nominal author; and, under an arrangement for that purpose, the name of the defendant, Kirby, was used as the publisher, and the numbers were sold at his shop upon commission, but the publication was under the management and at the expense of the plaintiff. The undertaking proceeded in this manner until the publication of the fifth number, when a dispute arose in consequence of an alteration in the title. Kirby refused to permit his name to appear to the work any longer. In December a final settlement of accounts took place, and the plaintiff circulated hand-bills, dated 20th Dec., stating that the succeeding numbers would be published by him, and the 6th No. would be published by him on Friday next, and that number was accordingly published by him on the 31st of December. On the 1st January, 1803, the 1st No of a periodical work was published by the defendants Kirby and Scott, under a similar title, described as a "New Series Improved." One of the arguments used by the defendants was that the plaintiff was not entitled to protection, as he, on his title-page, practised an imposition on the public by using the name of Granger, who did not exist. On the other hand, it was contended that the assumption of a fictitious name could not be considered a fraud upon the public, because it had to be done by "the most respectable authors." But Lord Eldon said he had considerable difficulty as to the false colours under which the original publication appeared. Though it was very usual, he could not represent it to his mind otherwise than as something excessively like a fraud on the public. Kirby's publication was restrained as a piracy and a breach of faith.

Letters of Advice [on a wife, a husband, the marriage ceremony, acquaintances, &c.] from a Lady of Distinction to her Niece, the Duchess of *, &c., shortly after her Marriage. London, Colburn, 1819.

"The following letters were written by the Countess * * * * * to her niece, the late Duchess of * * * * *, shortly after her marriage, which took place in the year 1774. The internal evidence of their genuineness is so strong, and must be so satisfactory to the minds of all who peruse them with the attention they deserve, that the Editor is content," etc.

Which, we suppose, means that these pretended letters are an imposture, in as much as they pretended to come from a person of rank, while in reality they are the work of some literary hack. It would by no means be the first that issued under Colburn's auspices.

INDEX OF AUTONYMS.

It will perhaps be useful to some of our readers who may desire further information with regard to the authors herein mentioned, that such may be found in Watts' Bibliotheca Britannica, which contains an entry of almost every book published up to about 1820: after this, Lowndes' Bibliographer's Manual, by Bohn, should be searched, and for religious pub. Darling's Cyclo. will be found useful; The English Catalogue, 1864; Stevens' Cat. of American Books; and Roorback and Trubner's American Bib. Guides. Allibone's Dict. of Eng. Lit. to 1859 will generally inform the reader whether an author is in any of these. We frequently refer to Men of the Time when an author is given in that work: our reference by no means implies that our remarks are taken from that useful publication. The number of names occurring in this work, not in any of the above, is remarkable. Several of our biographies are from original sources. We must acknowledge the very great assistance we have received from the Rev. C. Hole's Brief Biographical Dictionary.

- BARRETT, E. S. A man of great promise and talent, and author of numerous works, chiefly anon. or pseudim., a complete list of which we have attempted, as none is to be found elsewhere. His works seem to be in comparative obscurity, doubtless in consequence of the early death of the author. Books are like children: they require fostering and bringing up with the greatest care: to give them birth is not alone sufficient. Fortunate, therefore, is a departed author whose works obtain intelligent editing. He was of Irish birth, though educated in England, and a student of the Middle Temple, but his time was eventually devoted to literature, for at the age of twenty-one he published two satirical poems—see Polynus and Hogg (C.); but even while at school he wrote a play, with prologue and epilogue, which was performed before the master and his family with so much success that the master prohibited any future dramatic performances, fearing that he might incur blame for encouraging too much taste for the theatre. (N. & Q. 1 S. viii.) The Comet, a mock newspaper, 1808 [anon?]; The Tarantula, or Dance of Pools, a Squib, 1809 [anon?] is also attributed to him; Woman, a poem, 1810, published, as he says in his preface to the 2nd edit., 1818, "not at the request of friends," but contrary to their opinion, . . . it met with no success"; The Heroine, or Adventures of [a fair romance-reader, 1st edit.] Cherubina, (motto) "L'Histoire d'une Femme est toujours un Roman," 1813. 2nd edit., 1814. It is in letters, and the Biog. Dict., 1816, says, has been pronounced not inferior in wit and humour to "Tristram

- Shandy." "The absurdities of a school of fiction, at that time in high favour, are happily ridiculed; and a novel which had great success in its day, and is still to be found in some of the circulating libraries, called Six Weeks at Long's" (N. & Q. 1 S. viii. 423). "My wife! what a wife?" a comedy . . . performed at the Theatre Royal Haymarket, 1815. See The Author of all the Talents. In private, his worth and attractive manners are said to have gained him the esteem of his friends. He died, 1820, in Glamorganshire, of a rapid decline, occasioned by the bursting of a blood vessel, when in about the thirty-sixth year of his age. Hogg, C. — Polypus. — The Author of All the Talents.

- COLTON, Rev. Charles Caleb, was the son of the Rev. Burfoot Colton, canon residentiary of Salisbury, Born about 1780, and educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Cambridge, where he took his B.A. and M.A., and in due course obtained a fellowship. He was presented by his College to the Curacy of Tiverton; in 1818 he succeeded to the united livings of Kew and Petersham. Colton first attracted notice by a "pamphlet on the 'Sampford Ghost,'" 1810 (for other works see Watt. Bib. Brit.) See The Author of Hypocrisy, 1819. The "Lacon" was first published in 1820-22, and has been frequently republished; it is from the edition of William Tegg, 1866, that we obtain these particulars of Colton's life:—He was a man of ready susceptibility, but of very infirm principles, eccentric in manner, extravagant in his habits, and irremediably addicted to gambling and its attendant vices. Having contracted debts to a large amount chiefly for diamonds, jewellery, and wines, a fiat of Bankruptcy was issued against him. Bewildered by the number and gravity of his pecuniary obligations, Colton secretly embarked for the United States. This happening about the time of the murder of Weare, it was at first strongly suspected that he too had fallen by the hand of an assassin; but the secret of his whereabouts soon oozed out, and in 1822 a successor was appointed to his living. Returning to Europe, after a sojourn of some years in America [where surely he must have published something?] he took up his abode in Paris, where he was so successful in his gambling speculations, that in the course of a year or two he acquired a considerable fortune (it is said £25,000), but it was soon dissipated. After a life chequered by nearly every phase of good and adverse fortune, preferring suicide to the endurance of a painful surgical operation, he blew his brains out at Fontainebleau, in April, 1832; and this was the act of the man who, in his 'Lacon' utters this aphorism:—"The gamester, if he die a martyr to his profession, is doubly ruined. He adds his soul to every other loss, and by the act of suicide renounces earth to forfeit heaven."

- HALLIWELL, James Orchard, F.R.S., &c., Shakespeare scholar, author of numerous scientific, bibliographic, and other works, b. about 1820, Eng., son of Thomas H., of Sloane-st., Chelsea. M. of T., 1868. Published several pieces while at Cambridge in his teens. He and his friend Mr. Thomas Wright were the chief pioneers to revive the taste for Early English Literature. Mr. Halliwell has more particularly made Shakespeare the study of his life. He brought out a magnificent and elaborately annotated and illustrated edition of his favourite author in 16 folio volumes. Perhaps no literary man living has ever seen so many books through the press as writer and editor. Having pecuniary means, he has followed no profession. A list of upwards of fifty of his works, &c., will be found in Allibone's Dict. of Eng. Lit. He has also been a constant contributor of valuable notes to Notes and Queries. He is also author of An Introduction to the Evidences of Christianity, by a Fellow of the Royal Society, 1859. J. O. H.

 LAWRENCE, Frederick, born about 1821, in Berkshire, where his father was a large farmer; was in the employ of Messrs. Simp-kin, Marshall, and Co., the booksellers and publishers, and afterwards in the printed book department, British Museum, a short time after his friend J.
 Humffreys Parry (now serjeantat-law). Having written some articles that were considered clever, he was advised to go to the Bar. He accordingly entered himself of the Middle Temple, and was called in 1849.
 He attended the Berkshire Sessions, and obtained some success at the Bar. The author of this little work had the melancholy satisfaction of seeing him a few days before his death, to ask his permission to make such use as we required of some of his articles in Sharpe's Lond. Mag., which was readily granted. He published "The Life of Fielding . . ." Hall, Virtue and Co., 1855 (with some bibliographical notes by Mr. Thomas Watts in the Appendix). This is a capital biography, replete with interesting particulars, and information on contemporary writers. Mr. Lawrence collected many notes for a second edition, and also, we have heard, for a Life of Smollett. He was on the staff of the Weekly Dispatch for many years, and, we believe, contributed to other periodical publications, and was also editor of the Lawyer's Companion, Stevens and Sons, 1864 to 1868. During a short stay at Boulogne, he was seized with an attack of dropsy, which necessitated his immediate return. The disease had invaded his system for some years, and had rendered him less active and more disin-clined to any kind of work than he was during his better days of health. He died at his chambers in the Temple on the 25th of October, 1867. A Barrister.

- MADDEN, D. O., b. 1815, Ireland—1852, the son of a merchant, of Cork, his short life was entirely given up to literary pursuits, in which he eventually wore himself out, so that he may almost be said to have died of exhaustion of the brain. From a whim somewhat similar to that of Captain Marryat, Madden desired that no public notice should be taken of his death, and consequently there is none in any of the newspapers, nor in the Gent. Mag., or Annual Register. The Athenæum, however, was not bound to be silent, and in 1859 (ii. 209, 246) it gave a short but interesting notice of his literary labors. Ireland and its Rulers since 1839, appears to be his first autonymous work; but he was chiefly addicted to the anonymous and pseudonymous. For the sake, it is said, of distinguishing himself from another Madden he wrote his name Mad-dyn. The man who desired no obituary memoirs changed his name that he might be known! North, D.

- PENROSE, Elizabeth, of school history renown, under her pseudonym of Mrs. Markham. For forty years this name has been popular, and bids fair to endure double that time. We doubt whether many of the fair readers of the History trouble to read the advertisement to the later editions, which informs us that she was the wife of the Rev. John Penrose, and lived at Bracebridge, near Lincoln. She was the second daughter of the Rev. Dr. Cartwright, the inventor of the power-loom, and author of 'Armine and Elvira,' and other poems. She died at Lincoln, 24th of January, 1837.

- PHILLIPS, Sir Richard, Knight, one of the most extraordinary characters of his time, a man of the world, and of considerable energy, b. 1767, England—1840. He set out in life with a pseudonym, for we are told (Gent. Mag.) that his original name was Philip Richards. He was brought up with an uncle, a brewer, in Oxford-street, but a passion for literature and philosophy led him to detach himself from his family connections. He afterwards became a schoolmaster in Leicester, and it was no doubt from the experience thus obtained that he was enabled to write the school books which obtained so much celebrity under the different names he assumed. Being tired of schooling, however, he opened a hosiery shop, but, thinking that "politics were as profitable an article as he could deal in," he established The Leicester Herald, which was a success. Little is known of the ups and downs of his life, so little indeed that we cannot vouch for anything herein contained; the different notices of him appear to be all unauthentic. Mr. Timbs, however, has promised a truthful account, and until that appears we must be content to propagate error. It is much to be regretted that he destroyed the journal of his life which he commenced. He might have put many things recorded of him in a better light—we doubt whether he could have put them in a worse. He was through life a vegetarian, which did not prevent his living the period allotted to man. In 1793 he was prosecuted for selling Paine's Rights of Man, and suffered a year's imprisonment. When his term had expired, he sold his share in his newspaper. Shortly after his premises in Leicester were consumed by a fire, and, oddly enough, he was insured to the full amount—at least, so says our authority. He then went to London, and opened a hosier's shop. His next venture was a literary one, in the shape of The Monthly Magazine, which he owned for thirty years. He was elected sheriff in 1807, and received the honour of knighthood in 1808. His activity in office was very considerable, and he did much good. In 1809 he again got into difficulties, and all his copyrights were sold, though he was enabled to repurchase some. He was a most extraordinary mixture of principles and no principles, of honesty and dishonesty. As we have observed in N. and Q., his literary ventures must be highly curious, particularly those which relate to the manufacture of books. But we shall probably never know the real truth on the subject, and shall therefore have to put up with conjectures, which generally result in a thing being made out worse than it probably is. Watt, in his Bib. Brit., mixes him up with his namesake and contemporary the chemist. The following are all the works we have been able to collect which he published in his own name:—

1. On the Practices of Anonymous Critics, 1806; 2. A Letter to the Livery of London, relative to the views of the writer in executing the office of Sheriff, 1808, 8vo, 294; 3. Social Philosophy, or a New System of Practical Ethics, —; 4. Communications relative to the Datura Stramonium as a Cure for Asthma, 1811; 5. Treatise on the Powers and Duties of Juries, and on the Criminal Laws of England, 1811; 6. Golden Rules for Jurymen, 1814, on a sheet; 7. Popular Abstract of the New System of Philosophy proposed by Sir R. P. (vide his essays, Month. Mag., 1817 and 1818), a folio chart; 8. A Morning's Walk from London to Kew, 1817, 8vo, 423; 9. Essays on the Proximate Mechanical Causes of the General Phenomena of the Universe (revised from the Month. Mag., for July, 1817, Lond., Souter, 1818, 12mo, viii, 96, 3s. 6d., and 2nd edit., 1821; 10. Four Dialogues between an Oxford Tutor and a Disciple of the Common Sense Philosophy relative to the Proximate Causes of Material Phenomena, Lond., Sherwood, 1824, 8vo; 11. Golden Rules of Social Philosophy, or a New System of Practical Ethics, 1826; 12. A Personal Tour through the United Kingdom, Lond., Horatio Phillips, [Derby, printed 1828], 8vo, viii., 220. pts. 1 and 2 only; 13. Protest against the Prevailing Principles of Natural Philosophy, with the Development of a Common Sense System, 1830, 8vo, 71, with an autograph letter from the author, in the British Museum; 14. A Million of Facts, serving as a Common Place Book on all Subjects of Curiosity, Lond. (1832), 12mo, several editions; 15. A Dictionary of the Arts of Life and Civilization, Lond. (1833), 8vo; 16. Letter on the Theory of Education, 1835.

- RICHMOND, Rev. Legh, b. 1772—1827. A writer in Blackwood's Magazine, 1822, says that he - never heard this truly evangelical clergyman but once, and that he then thought him a wishy-washy preacher. He prosed away apparently with much facility, his course not being slackened by any distressing burthen of ideas. He seems to have paid a visit of conversion to Scotland, to show them "the road to salvation," and what is his reward? why almost universal scorn and contempt. "He is obviously a chosen vessel, without crack or flaw, and overflowing with sound doctrine," . . . "and Scotland will be saved by THE DAIRYMAN'S DAUGHTER." In "Three Days at Turvey, in Bedfordshire (the scene of the labors of the late Rev. L. R., A.M.), in the summer of 1847, by a Clergyman's son, South Shields, 1848," a memoir of the above, by F. S. SALT, Henry, b. 1780, England - d. 1827, the son of a medical practitioner of Lichfield. While young he made such progress in drawing that his father was induced to send him to London that he might study there. In 1801 he set up as a portrait painter; but he very soon determined to relinquish a profession in which he had no hopes of success; and a favorable opportunity occurring, on Lord Valentia's visiting India, Salt accompanied his lordship, and did not return to London until 1806, after an absence of four years and four months. He then prepared an account of his travels for the press, which he eventually published. He also published several other works of value. He was Consul-General in Egypt. It is to him that the nation owes many valuable Egyptian antiquities at the British Museum. Life by J. J. Halls, 1834. A Traveller.

SCARGILL, W. P. The Author of Nothing. We observed a writer publishing under this pseudonym last year.

SCHILLER, H. Carl. It is scarcely necessary to remark that this gentleman is not related to his namesake and countryman. About 1836 Mr. Schiller, who was then residing at Hull, was associated with E. J. Loder in producing several songs, which were very popular at the time, and have been frequently reprinted. Among them we have The Ivy, The Outlaw, The Forrester's Bride, Fair Alice. He was the musical critic to the Manchester Musical and Dramatic Review, and also contributed anonymously to a serial, "The Life and Adventures of a British Actor," and a song, which we believe was never set to music, on Napoleon I. Mr. Schiller is also an inventor, and has patented a method for "submerging deep sea Telegraphic Cables." He is the father of the accomplished pianist, Miss Madeleine Schiller. In his profession of an artist he is more particularly known for producing remarkably successful likenesses from description of deceased persons. The

 THOMAS, Miss Annie (Mrs. Pender Cudlip), a novelist of considerable talent, though by no means exempt from the remarks generally applicable to our lady-novellists. One critic, for instance, says, "it is a pity lady-novellists persist in writing about what they do not understand ; for we do not really think Miss Thomas understands—though she certainly affects—the language of the stable and the club." Most of her works, we believe, are republications from magazines, &c. The Author of Sir Victor's Choice.

WARD, R. P., b. 1765, Spain—1846, youngest son of John W., a merchant of Spain. Educated at Westminster School and at Oxford. Called to the Bar, I. T., 1790, but relinquished the profession in 1802 to become Under-Secretary of State in the Foreign Department, and he afterwards held other official appointments. He is author of numerous works of fiction and others. Life by G. Phipps, 1850. Tremaine*, or the Man of Refinement, was pub. in 1825. The Author of Tremaine.

WARDEN, W. (q. v.)

WARNER, Miss Anna B., youngest sister of the following:—Author of Dollars and Cents, 1853, and others. Lothrop, Amy.

WARNER, Miss Susan, b. America, daughter of Henry W., a member - of the Bar of New York. Her first story, The Wide Wide World, 1849, brought her into prominent notice, since which time she has written a great number of novels, tales, &c., all pseudonyms. Duyckinck, Cyclo. of Am. Lit. The Author of Queechy.—Wetherell.

- WARTER, Rev. J. W., b. 1806, England, son-in-law of Robert Southey. Oldacre, C.
- WATERS, C. We believe this name to be a pseudonym. Under it have been written a great number of "Detective Police Officer" class of tales, which, if not highly creditable, are highly lucrative. The Author of a Skeleton in Every House.
- WATTS, Thomas, b. in London early in this century. It is quite impossible to think of Mr. Watts without coupling his name with that of the British Museum Library. We have so fully given our opinions on this subject in our Bibliogian on J.-M. Quérard, that we shall not dilate upon them here. Mr. Watts has been a contributor to numerous periodicals and cyclopedias, generally, we believe, anonymously. He was appointed to the important post of Keeper of the Printed Books in the British Museum in 1866, and his chief energies have thus been devoted to the public service, the value of which literary students fully appreciate. See Men of the Time, 1868. P. P. C. R.
- WATSTER, G. E. A Minister of the Church of England.
- WELBY, Mrs. Amelia N., b. 1821, America—1852. An edition of her Poems pub. in 1850. Duyckinck. Amelia.
- WESTMACOTT, C. M. Blackmantle, B.

- WILLIAMS, James. Contributors, &c.
- WILLIAMS, John, journalist. Publicola.
- WILLIAMS, W. A Philadelphian.
- WILLIS, Duke. Wyscman, D.
- WILLS, W. G. (q.v.).
- WILSON, Miss H. The Authoress of Little Things.—The Author of Little Things.
- WILSON, Professor John, b. 1785, Scotland—1854. He was the son of a manufacturer at Paisley. Educated at Glasgow and Oxford, where he took honours, and was celebrated for his skill in athletic sports. He was some time before he decided on adopting literature as his profession. He contributed some fine letters to Coleridge's Friend under the pseudonym of Mathetes. He was Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, where he died. Life, by Mrs. Gordon, 1862. North, C.
- WILSON, John, of Islington. J. W.
- WILSON, Rev. R. F. Contributors, &c.
- WINTER, W. Mercurio.
- WISE, Lieutenant. Gringo, H.
- WITHERBY, W. A Layman, 1818.
- WOLCOT, Rev. John, b. 1738—1819. See N. & Q. 3 S. xii. Pindar, P.
- WOOD, Mrs. Henry (q.v.), who is rather severely treated in the notice of her works, is not one whit worse than numbers of her contemporaries, only she has been found out, and the others have not, we regret to say. She is the eldest daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Price, glove manufacturer, of Worcester, where

- she was born about 1820. She was married, at an early age, to a gentleman connected with the shipping trade. She commenced her literary career as contributor to the New Monthly Magazine. For further particulars, see our authority, M. of T., 1868.—The Author of East Lynne. (This lady is not the Mrs. Henry Wood, author of Sir Cyrus of Stonycleft. Lond., Newby, 1867).
- WOOD, Rev. J. G., b. 1827, London, the son of a surgeon, at one time chemical lecturer at the Middlesex Hospital, who afterwards removed to Oxford, where Mr. Wood was educated, at Merton College. The different appointments he has held will be found in Crockford's Clerical Directory. He originally employed a pseudonym for any bagatelles, as he only desired to be identified with works on Natural History. We have, however, lately seen the disguise thrown off. He has distinguished himself by the production of several goodly tomes yearly since 1853, having fairly earned the title to belong to what Mr. Edward Edwards calls "the honourable craft of book-makers." The latest work announced is his Bible Animals, 1868, for which we may safely predict an immense sale. Forrest, G. See Acheta Domestica, p. 3.
- WOODWARD, H. L. H. L. W.
- WOOLER, F. G. The Black Dwarf.
- WOOLEY, C. C. A. M. W.
- WRAXALL, Sir F. C. L., Bart. (q.v.).
b. 1828—1865, novelist and essayist. M. of T., 1862.
- WRIGHT, Frances. An English-woman.
- WRIGHT, J. M. In the work given, pub. in 1827, much of the author's experience is contained. A Trinity Man.
- WYNTER, Andrew, b. 1819, England, M.D. 1853, M.R.C.S. 1861, editor of the British Medical Journal. He is also contributor to our periodical literature. M. of T. Retnyw.
- YATES, Edmund Hodgson, son of the well-known actor, b. 1831, England. Holds a public appointment in the Post Office. Editor of Temple Bar Magazine. M. of T., 1868. Q.—The Flâneur.
- YONGE, Miss Charlotte Mary, b. 1823, England, only daughter of W. C. Y., Esq., of Otterbourne, Hants, 52nd Foot, and a magistrate for Hampshire. Her novels are of the High Church school. See M. of T. The Author of Abbey-church.—The Author of Hearts-ease.—The Author of Henrietta's Wish.—The Author of Kings of England.—The Author of Scenes and, &c.—The Author of The Heir of Redclyffe.

JOHN RUSSELL SMITH,

36, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON, W.

DILLARD (George) —The Sutton Dudleys of England, and the Dudleys of Massachusetts, in New England 8vo, pedigrees, &c, cloth 15s

An interesting volume to the English genealogist: it contains a good deal of new matter relating to this old English Family and their collateral branches

AGINCOURT —A Contribution towards an Authentic List of the Commanders of the English Host in King Henry the Fifth's Expedition By the Rev JOSEPH HUNTER, post 8vo 2s 6d

AKERMAN'S (John Yonge, Fellow and late Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries) Archaeological Index to Remains of Antiquity of the Celtic, Romano-British, and Anglo-Saxon Periods 8vo, illustrated with numerous engravings, comprising upwards of five hundred objects, cloth 15s

This work though intended as an introduction and a guide to the study of our early antiquities will, it is hoped, also prove of service as a book of reference to the practised Archaeologist

"One of the first wants of incipient Antiquary is the facility of comparison and here it is furnished him at once. The plates, indeed form the most valuable part of the book, both by their number and the judicious selection of types and examples which they contain. It is a book which we can only recommend safely and warmly to all who are interested in the antiquities of their native land." —Literary Gazette

AKERMAN'S (J Y) Introduction to the Study of Ancient and Modern Coins Foolscap 8vo, with numerous wood engravings from the original Coins (an excellent introductory book), cloth 6s 6d

CONTENTS —SECT 1.—Origin of Coinage—Greek Royal Coins—2 Greek Civic Coins—3 Greek Imperial Coins—4 Origin of Roman Coinage—Consular Coins—5 Roman Imperial Coins—6 Roman British Coins—7 Ancient British Coinage—8 Anglo-Saxon Coinage—9 English Coinage from the Conquest—10 Scotch Coinage—11 Coinage of Ireland—12 Anglo-Galic Coins—13 Continental Money in the Middle Ages—14 Various Representatives of Coinage—15 Forgeries in Ancient and Modern Times—16 Table of Prices of English Coins realized at Public Sales

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Remains of Pagan Saxondom, principally from Tumuli in England, drawn from the originals. Described and illustrated. One handsome volume, 4to, illustrated with 40 COLOURED PLATES, half morocco. £2. 2s (original price £3)

The plates are admirably executed by Mr. Basire, and coloured under the direction of the author, which is not the case with a re-issue of the volume now sold bound in cloth. It is a work well worthy the notice of the Archaeologist.

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Coins of the Romans relating to Britain. Described and Illustrated. Second edition, greatly enlarged, 8vo, with plates and woodcuts, cloth. 10s 6d

The "Prix de Numismatique" was awarded by the French Institute to the author for this work

"Mr. Akerman's volume contains a notice of every known variety, with copious illustrations, and is published at a very moderate price; it should be consulted, not merely for these particular coins, but also for facts most valuable to all who are interested in Romano-British History"—Archæol. Journal.

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Ancient Coins of Cities and Princes, Geographically Arranged and Described—Hispania, Gallia, Britannia, 8vo, with engravings of many hundred Coins from actual examples, cloth. 7s 6d (original price 18s)

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Tradesman's Tokens struck in London and its Vicinity, from 1648 to 1671, described from the originals in the British Museum, &c. 8vo, with 8 plates of numerous examples, cloth, 7s 6d (original price 15s).—LARGE PAPER in 4to, cloth. 15s

This work comprises a list of nearly 3000 Tokens, and contains occasional illustrative, topographical, and antiquarian notes on persons, places, streets, old tavern and coffee house signs, &c., &c., with an introductory account of the causes which led to the adoption of such a currency.

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) List of Tokens issued by Wiltshire Tradesmen in the Seventeenth Century. 8vo, plates, sewed. 1s 6d

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Wiltshire Tales, illustrative of the Manners, Customs, and Dialect of that and adjoining Counties. 12mo, cloth. 2s 6d

"We will conclude with a simple but hearty recommendation of a little book which is as humorous for the drolleries of the stories as it is interesting as a picture of rustic manners."—Tallis's Weekly Paper.

AKERMAN'S (J. Y.) Spring Tide; or, the Angler and his Friends. 12mo, plates, cloth. 2s 6d (original price 6s)

These Dialogues incidentally illustrate the Dialect of the West of England.

"Never in our recollection has the contemplative man's recreation been rendered more attractive, nor the delights of a country life set forth with a truer or more discriminating zest than in these pleasant pages."—Gent. Mag.

ALEXANDER (W., late Keeper of the Prints in the British Museum) Journey to Beresford Hall, in Derbyshire, the Seat of Charles Cotton, Esq., the celebrated Author and Angler. Crown 4to, printed on tinted paper, with a spirited frontispiece, representing Walton and his adopted Son, Cotton, in the Fishing-house, and vignette title page. Cloth. 5s Dedicated to the Anglers of Great Britain and the various Walton and Cotton Clubs. Only 100 printed.

ALFRED'S (King) Anglo-Saxon Version of the Compendious History of the World by Orosius, with Translation, Notes, and Dissertations, by the Rev. Dr. BOSWORTH, Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Oxford. Royal 8vo, map and facsimiles of the MSS., cloth. 16s

ALFRED (King).—Memorials of King Alfred, being Essays on the History and Antiquities of England during the Ninth Century—the Age of King Alfred. By various Authors. Edited and in part written by the Rev. Dr. GILLIS. Royal 8vo, pp. 400, coloured plate of K. Alfred's Jewel, seven plates of Anglo-Saxon Coins, and views of Grimbold's Crypt, cloth. 7s 6d

ALLIES (Jabez, F.S.A.) The Ancient British, Roman, and Saxon Antiquities and Folk-Lore of Worcestershire. 8vo, pp. 500, with 6 plates and 40 woodcuts, Second Edition, cloth. 7s 6d (original price 14s)

"The good people of Worcestershire are indebted to Mr Jabez Allies for a very handsome volume illustrative of the history of their native county. This book, which treats of the Ancient British, Roman, and Saxon Antiquities and Folk-Lore of Worcestershire, has now reached a second edition; and as Mr. Allies has embodied in this, not only the additions made by him to the original work, but also several separate publications on points of folk-lore and legendary interest, few boast of a more industriously or carefully compiled history of what may be called its popular antiquities. The work is very handsomely illustrated."—Notes and Queries.

ANDERSON (Wm.) Genealogy and Surnames, with some Heraldic and Biographical Notices. 8vo, woodcuts of Arms and Seals, cloth. 3s 6d (original price 6s) 1865

ANGLO-SAXON Version of the Life of St. Guthlac, Hermit of Croyland. Printed, for the first time, from a MS. in the Cottonian Library, with a Translation and Notes by CHARLES WYCLIFFE GOODWIN, M.A., Fellow of Catherine Hall, Cambridge. 12mo, cloth. 5s

ANGLO-SAXON Version of the Hexameron of St. Basil, and the Anglo-Saxon Remains of St. Basil's Admonitio ad Filium Spiritualem. Now first printed from MSS. in the Bodleian Library, with a Translation and Notes by the Rev. H. W. NORMAN. 8vo, second edition, enlarged, sewed. 4s

ANGLO-SAXON.—Narratiunculæ Anglice Conscriptæ. De pergamenis exhibebat notis illustratis eruditæ copiam, faciebat T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A. 8vo. 6s

Containing Alexander the Great's Letter to Aristotle on the situation of India—Of wonderful things in the East—The Passion of St. Margaret the Virgin—Of the Generation of Man, &c.

ANGLO-SAXON.—A Fragment of Ælfric's Anglo-Saxon Grammar, Ælfric's Glossary, and a Poem on the Soul and Body, of the XIIIth Century, discovered among the Archives of Worcester Cathedral, by Sir THOMAS PHILLIPS, Bart. Folio, PRIVATELY PRINTED, sewed. 1s 6d

Several other Anglo-Saxon works will be found in this Catalogue.

ARCHÆOLOGIA CAMBRENSIS.—A Record of the Antiquities, Historical, Genealogical, Topographical, and Architectural, of Wales and its Marches. First Series, complete, 4 vols, 8vo, many plates and woodcuts, cloth. £2. 2s Odd Parts may be had to complete Sets.

—— Second Series, 6 vols, 8vo, cloth. £3. 3s

—— Third Series, vol 1 to 12. £1. 10s each

Published by the Cambrian Archæological Association.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Report of the Transactions of the Annual Meeting of the Archæological Institute held at Chichester, July, 1853. 8vo, many plates and woodcuts, cloth. 7s 6d Printed uniformly with the other Annual Congresses of the Institute.

ARCHER FAMILY.—Memorials of Families of the Surname of Archer in various Counties of England, and in Scotland, Ireland, Barbadoes, America, &c. By Capt. J. H. LAWRENCE ARCHER. 4to, but few copies printed, cloth. 12s 6d Particularly interesting about Bradford, Leeds, Halifax, and their neighbourhoods, and a curious picture of manners and persons in the middle of the last century.

AUTOGRAPHICAL Miscellany; a Collection of Autograph Letters, Interesting Documents, &c., executed in facsimile by FREDK. NETHERCLIFF, each facsimile accompanied with a page of letter-press by R. SIMS, of the British Museum. Royal 4to, A HANDSOME VOL, extra cloth. £1. 1s (original price £1. 16s)

Containing sixty examples of hitherto unpublished Letters and Documents of Blake, Boileau, Buonaparte, Burns, Calvin, Camden, Carrier, Catherine de Medicis, Charles I., Chatterton, Congreve, Crammer, Cromwell, Danton, D'Aubigne, Dryden, Edward VI., Elizabeth, Elizabeth (sister of Louis XVI.), Franklin, Galilei, Glover, Goethe, Goldsmith, Henry VIII., Hyde (Anne), James II., Jonson, Kepler, Kotzebue, Latimer, Loyola, Louis XIV., Louis XVI., Luther, Maintenon, Maria Antoinette, Marlborough, Marmontel, Mary Queen of Scots, Melancthon, Newton, Penn, Pompadour, Pole (Cardinal), Raleigh, Ridley, Robespierre, Rousseau, Rubens, Sand, Schiller, Spenser, Sterne, Tasso, Voltaire, Walpole (Horace), Washington, Wolfe, Wolsey, Wren, and Young.

For the interesting nature of the documents, this collection far excels all the precious ones. With two exceptions (formerly badly executed), they have never been published before.

BAIGENT (F. J., of Winchester) History and Antiquities of the Parish Church of Wyke, near Winchester. 8vo, engravings. 2s 6d

BANKS' (Sir T. C.) Baronia Anglia Concentrata, or a Concentration of all the Baronies called Baronies in Fee, deriving their Origin from Writ of Summons, and not from any Specific Limited Creation, showing the Descent and Line of Heirship, as well of those Families mentioned by Sir William Dugdale, as of those whom that celebrated Author has omitted to notice; interspersed with Interesting Notices and Explanatory Remarks. Where to is added, the Proofs of Parliamentary Sitting, from the Reign of Edward I. to Queen Anne; also, a Glossary of Dormant English, Scotch, and Irish Peerage Titles, with reference to presumed existing Heirs. 2 vols, 4to, cloth. 15s (original price £3. 3s)

LARGE PAPER COPY (very few printed). 2 vols. £1. 1s

A book of great research, by the well known author of the "Dormant and Extinct Peerage," and other heraldic and historical works. Those fond of genealogical pursuits ought to secure a copy while it is so cheap. It may be considered a supplement to his former works. Vol. i. pp. 210-300, contains an Historical Account of the first Settlement of Nova Scotia, and the foundation of the Order of Nova Scotia Baronets, distinguishing those who had seizin of lands there.

BANKS' (W. Stott, of Wakefield) Walks in Yorkshire. I. In the North West. II. In the North East. Thick fcap. 8vo, 2 large maps, cloth. 5s

BARKER.—Literary Anecdotes and Contemporary Reminiscences of Professor Porson and others, from the Manuscript Papers of the late E. H. Barker, Esq., of Thetford, Norfolk, with an Original Memoir of the Author. 2 vols, 8vo, cloth. 12s 1852
A singular book, full of strange stories and jests.

BARKER (W. Jones) Historical and Topographical Account of Wensleydale, and the Valley of the Yore, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. 8vo, illustrated with views, seals, arms, &c., cloth. 4s 6d (original price 8s 6d)

"This modest and unpretending compilation is a pleasant addition to our topographical literature, and gives a good general account of a beautiful part of England comparatively little known. It is handsomely printed with a number of finely executed woodcuts by Mr. Howard Dudley. . . . No guide to the district exists applicable alike to the well-filled and scantily furnished purse—a defect which the author has endeavoured to supply by the present volume.

BARNES (Rev. W.) Tiw; or a View of the Roots and Stems of the English as a Teutonic Tongue. Fcap. 8vo, cloth. 5s

"I hold that my primary roots are the roots of all the Teutonic languages; and, if my view is the true one, it must ultimately be taken up by the German and other Teutonic grammarians, and applied to their languages."—The Author.

BARNES (Rev. William, of Came Rectory, Dorchester) A Philological Grammar, grounded upon English, and formed from a comparison of more than Sixty Languages. Being an Introduction to the Science of Grammars of all Languages, especially English, Latin, and Greek. 8vo (pp. 322), cloth. 9s

"Mr Barnes' work is an excellent specimen of the manner in which the advancing study of Philology may be brought to illustrate and enrich a scientific exposition of English Grammar."—Edinburgh Guardian.

"Of the science of Grammar, by induction from the philological facts of many languages, Mr. Barnes has, in this volume, supplied a concise and comprehensive manual. Grammarians may differ as to the regularity of the principles on which nations have constructed their forms and usages of speech, but it is generally allowed that some conformity or similarity of practice may be traced, and that an attempt may be made to expound a true science of Grammar. Mr. Barnes has so far grounded his Grammar upon English as to make it an English Grammar, but he has continually referred to comparative philology, and sought to render his work illustrative of general forms, in conformity with principles common, more or less, to the language of all mankind. More than sixty languages have been compared in the course of preparing the volume; and the general principles laid down will be found useful in the study of various tongues. It is a learned and philosophical treatise."—Literary Gazette.

BARNES (Rev. W.) Anglo-Saxon Delectus; serving as a first Class-Book to the Language. 12mo, cloth. 2s 6d

"To those who wish to possess a critical knowledge of their own Native English, some acquaintance with Anglo-Saxon is indispensable; and we have never seen an introduction better calculated than the present to supply the wants of a beginner in a short space of time. The declensions and conjugations are well stated, and illustrated by references to Greek, the Latin, French, and other languages. A philosophical spirit pervades every part. The Delectus consists of short pieces on various subjects, with extracts from Anglo-Saxon History and the Saxon Chronicle. There is a good Glossary at the end."—Athenæum, Oct. 20, 1849.

BARNES (Rev. W.) Notes on Ancient Briton and the Britons. Fcap. 8vo, cloth. 3s

"Mr. Barnes has given us the result of his Collections for a Course of Lectures on this subject, and has produced a series of Sketches of the Ancient Britons, their language, laws, and modes of life, and of their social state as compared with that of the Saxons, which will be read with considerable interest."—Notes and Queries.

"We are very glad to meet with such pleasant and readable 'Notes' as Mr. Barnes'. They are very unaffected essays, imparting much warmth to the old carcase of British lore, and evincing some real study. He has found out the value of the old Welsh laws, and has made some useful comparisons between them and those of the Saxons with much freshness if not absolute novelty."—Guardian.

BARNES (Rev. W.) Views of Labour and Gold. Fcp. 8vo, cloth. 3s

"Mr. Barnes is a reader and a thinker. He has a third and a conspicuous merit—his style is perfectly lucid and simple. If the humblest reader of ordinary intelligence desired to follow out the process by which societies are built up and held together, he has but to betake himself to the study of Mr. Barnes's epitomes. The title 'Views of Labour and Gold,' cannot be said to indicate the scope of the Essays, which open with pictures of primitive life, and pass on, through an agreeably diversified range of topics, to considerations of the rights, duties, and interests of Labour and Capital, and to the enquiry, What constitutes the utility, wealth, and positive well being of a nation? Subjects of this class are rarely handled with so firm a grasp and such light and artistic manipulation."—Athenæum.

"The opinion of such a Scholar and Clergyman of the Established Church on subjects of political economy cannot fail to be both interesting and instructive, and the originality of some of his views and expressions is well calculated to attract and repay the most careful attention."—Financial Reformer.

"BIBLIA PAUPERUM." One of the earliest and most curious Block Books, reproduced in facsimile from a copy in the British Museum, by J. Ph. BERJEAU. Royal 4to; half bound. £2. 2s

The BIBLIA PAUPERUM, known also by the title of HISTORIA VETERIS ET NOVI TESTAMENTI, is a set of woodcuts in which the Old and New Testament are both brought to memory by pictures, and some lines of text in Latin. This name, BIBLIA PAUPERUM, is derived from its use by monks of the poorer orders commonly called PAUPERES CHRISTI.

As a specimen of the earliest woodcuts and of printed block books, destined to supersede the manuscripts anterior to the valuable invention of Guttenberg, the BIBLIA PAUPERUM is well worthy the attention of the amateur of Fine Arts as well as of the Bibliographer. It consists of 40 engravings, printed on one side only of the leaves, and disposed so as to have the figures opposite to each other.

The engravings were printed by friction, with a substance of a brownish colour instead of printing ink, which was unknown at this early period. To imitate as near as possible the original, the plates in this facsimile are disposed opposite each other, and printed in a brownish colour. Various editions of this Block-Book have been discovered, without any writer being able to say which is the first one. A review of them is given in the printed Introduction of the book.

Besides the rhymed Latin Poetry—of which part was given by Henneken, and after him by Ottley—the Introduction gives, for the first time, the whole of the Text printed on both sides in the upper compartment, as well as an English Explanation of the subject.

ONLY 250 COPIES HAVE BEEN PRINTED, UNIFORMLY WITH MR. S. LEIGH SOTHERBY'S Principia Typographica.

BIGSBY'S (Robert, M.A., LL.D.) Historical and Topographical Description of Repton, in the County of Derby, with Incidental View of objects of note in its Vicinity. 4to, a handsome volume, with SEVENTY illustrations on copper, stone, and wood, cloth. 18s (original price £3. 3s)

BOYNE (W., F.S.A.) Tokens issued in the Seventeenth Century in England, Wales, and Ireland, by Corporations, Merchants, Tradesmen, &c., described and illustrated. Thick 8vo, 42 plates, cloth. £1. 1s (original price £2. 2s)

Nearly 9500 Tokens are described in this work, arranged alphabetically under Counties and Towns. To the Numismatist, the Topographer, and Genealogist, it will be found extremely useful.

BOSWORTH (Rev. Joseph, D.D., Anglo-Saxon Professor in the University of Oxford) Compendious Anglo-Saxon and English Dictionary. 8vo, closely printed in treble columns. 12s

"This is not a mere abridgment of the large Dictionary, but almost an entirely new work. In this compendious one will be found, at a very moderate price all that is most practical and valuable in the former expensive edition, with a great accession of new words and matter."—Author's Preface.

BOSWORTH and WARING.—Four Versions of the Holy Gospels, viz., in Gothic, A.D. 360; Anglo-Saxon, 995; Wycliffe, 1389; and Tyndale, 1526, in parallel columns, with Preface and Notes by the Rev. Dr. BOSWORTH, Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Oxford, assisted by GEORGE WARING, M.A., of Cambridge and Oxford. One vol, 8vo, above 600 pages, cloth. 12s 6d

A very low price has been fixed to ensure an extended sale among students and higher schools

— LARGE PAPER. 4to, a handsome volume, not many printed, cloth. £2. 2s

"The texts are printed in four parallel columns, and very great care appears to have been taken in their collation and correction"—ATHENÆUM.

"We heartily welcome this volume, brought out with so much care and ability. It does credit to the printers of the University. . . . The work is scholarly, and is a valuable contribution to the materials for Biblical Criticism. We heartily commend it to the study of all who are interested either in the philology of the English language, or in the history and formation of our Authorized Version"—THE CHRISTIAN REMEMBRANCE, a Quarterly Review.

"It may almost be a question, whether the present volume possesses greater interest for the divine or for the philologist. To the latter it must certainly be interesting from the opportunity which it affords him of marking the gradual development of our languages. The four versions of the Gospel, . . . with a learned and instructive preface, and a few necessary notes, form a volume, the value and importance of which need scarcely be insisted upon."—NOTES AND QUERIES.

BLAKEY (Robert) Historical Sketches of the Angling Literature of all Nations, to which is added a Bibliography of English Writers on Angling, by J. R. Smith. Fcap. 8vo, cloth. 5s

CHADWICK (William) The Life and Times of Daniel De Foe, with Remarks, Digressive and Discursive. 8vo, pp. 472, portrait, cloth 10s 6d.

"Daniel De Foe devoted his life and energies to the defence of free institutions and good government. He was the Radical of his day. He not only wrote, but suffered for truth and liberty. He was impoverished and persecuted for his labours in this cause; nay, he was repeatedly imprisoned for his principles, or for his unwavering attachment to them, and for his boldness and honesty in asserting them. He was the vigorous and indefatigable opponent of priestism, of ecclesiastical domination, and of the Popish tendencies of his time. We might not approve of all he wrote against the Catholics, but we should remember that he saw and felt, as we cannot, how inherently opposed to true freedom is the Catholic system. Although we live in very different times from those in which De Foe lived, yet his life is full of pregnant lessons for the liberals and friends of religious freedom of our day." —Bradford Review.

CHRONICLE of London from 1089 to 1483, written in the 15th Century, and for the first time printed from MSS. in the British Museum, with numerous Contemporary Illustrations of Royal Letters, Poems, descriptive of Public Events and Manners and Customs of the Metropolis. (Edited by SIR HARRIS NICOLAS.) 4to, facsimile, cloth bds. 15s

Only 250 copies printed. It forms a Supplement to the Chronicles of Harding, Rastall, Grafton, Hall, and others.

CHATTO (W. A., Author of "Jackson's History of Wood Engraving") Facts and Speculations on the History of Playing Cards in Europe 8vo, profusely illustrated with engravings, both plain and coloured, cloth £1. 1s

"The inquiry into the origin and signification of the suits and their marks, and the heraldic, theological, and political emblems pictured from time to time, in their changes, opens a new field of antiquarian interest, and the pervasiveness with which Mr Chatto has explored it leaves little to be gained by his successors. The plates with which the volume is enriched add considerably to its value in this point of view. It is not to be denied that, taken altogether, it contains more matter than has ever before been collected in one view upon the same subject. In spite of its faults, it is exceedingly amusing, and the most critical reader cannot fail to be entertained by the variety of curious outlying learning Mr Chatto has somehow contrived to draw into the investigation."—Atlas.

"Indeed, the entire production deserves our warmest approbation."—Illustrated Gazette.

"A perfect fund of antiquarian research and most interesting even to persons who never play at cards."—Lancet Magazine.

"A curious, entertaining, and really learned book."—Ramster.

"THE GAME OF THE CHESSE," the first book printed in England by WILLIAM CAXTON, reproduced in facsimile from a copy in the British Museum, with a few Remarks on Caxton's Typographical Productions, by VINCENT FERGINS. 4to, pp 184, with 23 curious woodcuts, half morocco, uncut £1 1s—or, in antique calf, with bevelled boards and carmine edges £1 8s

Frequently, as we read of the Works of Caxton and the early English Printers, and of their Black Letter Books, very few persons ever had the opportunity of seeing any of these productions, and forming a proper estimate of the ingenuity and skill of those who first practised the "Noble Art of Printing."

THE TYPE HAS BEEN CAREFULLY IMITATED, AND THE WOODCUTS FACSIMILIED BY MISS BYFIELD. The Paper and Watermarks have also been made expressly, as near as possible, like the original, and the book is accompanied by a few remarks of a practical nature, which have been suggested during the progress of the fount, and the necessary study and comparison of Caxton's Works with those of his contemporaries in Germany, by Mr V. FERGINS, who spent two years' "labour of love" in cutting the matrices for the type.

ELLIOTT.—Life, Poetry, and Letters of Ebenezer Elliott, the Corn-law Rhymers (of Sheffield). Edited by his Son-in-Law, JOHN WATKINS. Post 8vo, cloth, (an interesting volume). 3s (original price 7s 6d)

ENGLAND as seen by Foreigners in the Days of Elizabeth and James the First, comprising Translations of the Journals of the two Dukes of Wirtemberg in 1592 and 1610, both illustrative of Shakespeare. With Extracts from the Travels of Foreign Princes and others. With Copious Notes, an Introduction, and ETCHINGS. By WILLIAM BRENCHEY RYE, Assistant Keeper of the Department of Printed Books, British Museum. Thick foolscap 4to, elegantly printed by Whittingham, extra cloth. 15s

"This curious volume has been the labours of a scholar's love, and will be read with ease by all. The idea of assembling the testimonies of foreign visitors, and showing us how we appeared to others in the days of Bess, by way of contrast and comparison to the aspect we present in the days of Victoria, was one which involved much arduous research. Mr Rye had had no predecessor. . . . He has not only added an introduction to the works he assembles and translates, but has enriched them with some hundred pages of notes on all kinds of subjects, exhibiting a wide and minute research."—Fortnightly Review. (G. H. LEWES)

"It contains a good deal of curious and amusing matter."—Saturday Review.

"Mr Rye's work claims the credit of a valuable body of historical annotation."—Athenæum.

"The book is one of the most entertaining of the class we have seen for a long while. It contains a complete and lively reflex of English life and manners at the most fascinating period of our history."—London Review

"A book replete both with information and amusement, furnishing a series of very curious pictures of England in the Olden Time."—Notes and Queries.

"It is difficult to convey a just impression of Mr. Rye's volume in a short criticism, because the really interesting feature of it is the quaintness, and, to modern eyes, the simplicity of most of the narratives, which cannot be reproduced with full effect except in quotations, for which we have no space."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A handsome, well-printed, entertaining book—entertaining and something more, and comes very welcome to the time. . . . It is in such accidental notices that the chief interest and the not slight value of collections such as this consists: and when they are as well edited, they have a use on the shelves after their freshness is past: they help our familiarity with our history."—Reader.

EVANS (John, F.S.A., Secretary to the Numismatic Society) Coins of the Ancient Britons. Arranged and Described. Thick 8vo, many plates, engraved by F. W. Fairholt, F.S.A., and cuts, cloth, a handsome volume. £1. 1s

An Introduction to every History of Great Britain.

GRENVILLE (Henry) Chronological Synopsis of the Four Gospels on a new plan, with Notes. 8vo, cloth. 1s 6d

Designed to show that on a minute critical analysis, the writings of the four Evangelists contain no contradictions within themselves, and that such passages that have appeared to many critics to raise doubt as to the consistency of these Records of our Lord's Ministry, really afford, when explained, the most satisfactory proofs that there was no collusion between the several writers, and that they may therefore be thoroughly relied on as "INDEPENDENT" witnesses of the Truth of what they record.

HADFIELD (James, Architect) Ecclesiastical Architecture of the County of Essex, from the Norman Era to the Sixteenth Century, with Plans, Elevations, Sections, Details, &c., from a Series of Measured Drawings, and Architectural and Chronological Descriptions. LETTERS of the KINGS of ENGLAND—Now first collected from the Originals in Royal Archives, and from other Authentic Sources, Private as well as Public. Edited, with Historical Introduction and Notes, by J. O. HALLIWELL. Two handsome volumes, post 8vo, with portraits of Henry VIII. and Charles I., cloth. 8s (original price £1. 1s)

These volumes form a good companion to Ellis's Original Letters.

The collection comprises, for the first time, the love-letters of Henry VIII. to Anne Boleyn, in a complete form, which may be regarded, perhaps, as the most singular documents of the kind that have descended to our times; the series of letters of Edward VI. will be found very interesting specimens of composition; some of the letters of James I., hitherto unpublished, throw light on the Murder of Overbury, and prove beyond a doubt the King was implicated in it in some extraordinary and unpleasant way; but his Letters to the Duke of Buckingham are of the most singular nature; only imagine a letter from a Sovereign to his Prime Minister commencing thus: "My own sweet and dear child, blessing, blessing on thy heart-roots and all thine." Prince Charles and the Duke of Buckingham's Journey into Spain has never been before so fully illustrated as it is by the documents given in this work, which also includes the very curious letters from the Duke and Duchess of Buckingham to James I.

LIBER ALBUS: the White Book of the City of London. Compiled A.D. 1419, by JOHN CARPENTER, Common Clerk; RICHARD WHITTINGTON, Mayor. Translated from the Original Latin and Anglo-Norman, by H. T. Riley, M.A. 4to, pp. 672 (original price 18s), the few remaining copies offered, in cloth, at 9s—Half morocco (Roxburghe style), 10s 6d—Whole bound in vellum, carmine edges, 12s—Whole morocco, carmine edges, 13s 6d

Extensively devoted to details which must of necessity interest those who care to know something more about their forefathers than the mere fact that they have existed. Many of them—until recently consigned to oblivion ever since the passing away of the remote generations to which they belonged—intimately connected with the social condition, usages, and manners of the people who—uncouth, unlearned, ill-housed, ill-fed, and comfortless though they were, still formed England's most important, most wealthy, and most influential community throughout the chequered and troublous times of the 13th and 14th centuries. During this period, in fact, there is hardly a phase or feature of English national life upon which, in a greater or less degree, from these pages of the "Liber Albus," some light is not reflected.

LIBRARY OF OLD AUTHORS.

Elegantly and uniformly printed in foolscap 8vo, in cloth. Of some there are LARGE PAPER copies for the connoisseur of choice books.

THE Vision and Creed of PIERS PLOUGHMAN. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT; a new edition, revised, with additions to the Notes and Glossary. 2 vols. 10s 1856

"The Vision of Piers Ploughman" is one of the most precious and interesting monuments of the English Language and Literature, and also of the social and political condition of the country during the fourteenth century. . . . Its author is not certainly known, but its time of composition can, by internal evidence, be fixed at about the year 1362. On this and on all matters bearing upon the origin and object of the poem, Mr. Wright's historical introduction gives ample information. . . . In the thirteen years that have passed since the first edition of the present text was published by the late Mr. Pickering, our old literature and history has been more studied, and we trust that a large circle of readers will be prepared to welcome this cheaper and carefully revised reprint."—Literary Gazette.

THE Dramatic and Poetical Works of JOHN MARSTON. Now first collected, and edited by J. O. HALLIWELL, F.R.S., &c. 3 vols. 15s 1856

"The edition deserves well of the public; it is carefully printed, and the annotations, although neither numerous nor extensive, supply ample explanations upon a variety of interesting points. If Mr. Halliwell had done no more than collect these plays, he would have conferred a boon upon all lovers of our old dramatic poetry."—Literary Gazette.

REMARKABLE Providences of the Earlier Days of American Colonisation. By INCREASE MATHER, of Boston, N.E. With Introductory Preface by George Offor. Portrait. 5s 1856

A very singular collection of remarkable sea deliverances, accidents, remarkable phenomena, witchcraft, apparitions, &c., &c., connected with inhabitants of New England, &c., &c. A very amusing volume, conveying a faithful portrait of the state of society, when the doctrine of a peculiar providence and personal intercourse between this world and that which is unseen was fully believed.

THE Table Talk of JOHN SELDEN. With a Biographical Preface and Notes by S. W. SINGER. Third edition, portrait. 5s 1860

——— LARGE PAPER. Post 8vo, cloth. 7s 6d 1860

"Nothing can be more interesting than this little book, containing a lively picture of the opinions and conversations of one of the most eminent scholars and most distinguished patriots England has produced. There are few volumes of its size so pregnant with sense, combined with the most profound learning: it is impossible to open it without finding some important fact or discussion, something practically useful and applicable to the business of life. Coleridge says, 'There is more weighty bullion sense in this book than I ever found in the same number of pages in any uninspired writer.' . . . Its merits had not escaped the notice of Dr. Johnson, though in politics opposed to much it inculcates, for in reply to an observation of Boswell, in praise of the French Ana, he said, 'A few of them are good, but we have one book of the kind better than any of them—Selden's Table Talk.'"—Mr. Singer's Preface.

THE Poetical Works of WILLIAM DRUMMOND, of Hawthornden. Now first published entire. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL. Fine portrait. 5s 1856

"The sonnets of Drummond," says Mr. Hallam, "are polished and elegant, free from conceit and bad taste, and in pure unblemished English."

ENCHIRIDION, containing Institutions—Divine, Contemplative Practical, Moral, Ethical, Economical, and Political. By FRANCIS QUARLES. Portrait. 3s 1856

"Had this little book been written at Athens or Rome, its author would have been classed with the wise men of his country."—Headley.

THE Works in Prose and Verse of Sir THOMAS OVERBURY. Now first collected. Edited, with Life and Notes, by E. F. RIMBAULT. Portrait after Pass. 5s 1856

HYMNS and Songs of the Church. By GEORGE WITHER. Edited, with Introduction, by EDWARD FARR. Also the Musical Notes, composed by Orlando Gibbons. With portrait after Hole. 5s 1856

"Mr. Farr has added a very interesting biographical introduction, and we hope to find that the public will put their seal of approbation to the present edition of an author who may fairly take his place on the same shelf with George Herbert."—Gent's Mag. Oct., 1856.

HALLELUJAH; or, Britain's Second Remembrancer, in Praiseful and Penitential Hymns, Spiritual Songs, and Moral Odes. By GEORGE WITHER. With Introduction by EDWARD FARR. Portrait. 6s 1857

Hitherto this interesting volume has only been known to the public by extracts in various publications. So few copies of the original are known to exist, that the copy from which this reprint has been taken cost twenty-one guineas.

MISCELLANIES. By JOHN AUBREY, F.R.S., the Wiltshire Antiquary. FOURTH EDITION. With some Additions and an Index. Portrait and cuts. 4s 1857

CONTENTS: - Day Fatality, Fatalities of Families and Places, Portents, Omens, Dreams, Apparitions, Voices, Impulses, Knockings, Invisible Blows, Prophecies, Miracles, Magic, Transportation by an Invisible Power, Visions in a Crystal, Converse with Angels, Corpse Candles, Oracles, Ecstasy, Second Sight, &c.; with an Appendix, containing his Introduction to the Survey of North Wiltshire.

THE Iliads of HOMER, Prince of Poets, never before in any language truly translated, with a Comment on some of his chief Places—Done according to the Greek by GEORGE CHAPMAN, with Introduction and Notes by the Rev. RICHARD HOOPER. 2 vols, sq. fcap. 8vo. SECOND AND REVISED EDITION, with portrait of Chapman, and frontispiece. 12s 1865

"The translation of Homer, published by George Chapman, is one of the greatest treasures the English language can boast."—Gottwin.

"With Chapman, Pope had frequently consultations, and perhaps never translated any passage till he read his version."—Dr. Johnson.

"He covers his defects with a daring, fiery spirit, that animates his translation, which is something like what one might imagine Homer himself to have writ before he arrived at years of discretion."—Pope.

"Chapman's translation, with all its defects, is often exceedingly Homeric, which Pope himself seldom obtained."—Hallam.

"Chapman writes and feels as a Poet—as Homer might have written had he lived in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth."—Coleridge.

"I have just finished Chapman's Homer. Did you ever read it? It has the most continuous power of interesting you all along. . . . The earnestness and passion which he has put into every part of these poems would be incredible to a reader of mere modern translation."—Charles Lamb.

HOMER'S ODYSSEY. Translated according to the Greek by GEORGE CHAPMAN. With Introduction and Notes by Rev. RICHARD HOOPER. 2 vols, square fcp. 8vo, with facsimile of the rare original frontispiece. 12s. 1857

HOMER'S Battle of the Frogs and Mice; HESIOD'S Works and Days; MUSÆUS'S Hero and Leander; JUVENAL'S Fifth Satire. Translated by GEORGE CHAPMAN. Edited by Rev. RICHARD HOOPER. Square fcp. 8vo, frontispiece after Pass. 6s. 1858

"The editor of these five rare volumes has done an incalculable service to English literature by taking George Chapman's folios out of the dust of time-honoured libraries, by collating them with loving care and patience, and, through the agency of his enterprising publisher, bringing Chapman entire and complete within the reach of those who can best appreciate and least afford to purchase the early editions."—Athenæum.

POETICAL Works of ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Canon of Loretto, now first completely edited by W. B. TURNBULL. 4s 1856

"His piety is simple and sincere—a spirit of unaffected gentleness and kindness pervades his poems—and he is equally distinguished by weight of thought and sweetness of expression."—Saturday Review

— LARGE PAPER, 4 vols, post 8vo, cloth. £1. 10s.

Ascham is a great name in our national literature. He was one of the first founders of a true English style in prose composition, and of the most respectable and useful of our scholars.—Retrospective Review.

LONG (Henry Lawes) On the March of Hannibal from the Rhone to the Alps. 8vo, map. 2s 6d

LOWER'S (Mark Antony, M.A., F.S.A.) Patronymica Britannica, a Dictionary of Family Names. Royal 8vo, 500 pages, with illustrations, cloth. £1. 5s

This work is the result of a study of British Family Names, extending over more than twenty years. The favourable reception which the Author's "English Surnames" obtained in the sale of Three Editions, and the many hundreds of communications to which that work gave rise, have convinced him that the subject is one in which considerable interest is felt. He has therefore been induced to devote a large amount of attention to the origin, meaning, and history of our family designations: a subject which, when investigated in the light of ancient records and of modern philology, proves highly illustrative of many habits and customs of our ancestors, and forms a very curious branch of Archaeology.—Preface.

LOWER'S (M. A.) Curiosities of Heraldry, with Illustrations from Old English Writers. With illuminated Title-page, and numerous engravings from designs by the Author. 8vo, cloth. 14s

"The present volume is truly a worthy sequel (to the 'SURNAME') in the same curious and antiquarian line, blending with remarkable facts and intelligence, such a fund of anecdote and illustration, that the reader is almost surprised to find that he has learned so much while he appeared to be pursuing mere amusement. The text is so pleasing that we scarcely dream of its sterling value; and it seems as if, in unison with the woodcuts, which so cleverly explain its points and adorn its various topics, the whole design were intended for a relaxation from study, rather than an ample exposition of an extraordinary and universal custom, which produced the most important effect upon the minds and habits of mankind."—Literary Gazette.

"Mr Lower's work is both curious and instructive, while the manner of its treatment is so inviting and popular, that the subject to which it refers, which many have hitherto had too good reason to consider meagre and unprofitable, assumes, under the hands of the writer, the novelty of fiction with the importance of historical truth."—Athenæum.

LOWER'S (M. A.) Contributions to Literature, Historical, Antiquarian, and Metrical. Post 8vo, woodcuts, cloth. 7s 6d

The impressions on the mind of a reader of these Letters of Moore in Lord Russell's edition will be not only incomplete, but erroneous, without the information to be derived from this very interesting volume.

MORLAND.—Account of the Life, Writings, and Inventions of Sir Samuel Morland, Master of Mechanics to Charles II. By J. O. HALLIWELL. 8vo, sewed. 1s

MUNFORD (Rev. Geo., Vicar of East Winch, Norfolk) Analysis of Domesday Book for the County of Norfolk. 8vo, with pedigrees and arms, cloth. 10s 6d

"Many extracts have been made at various times for the illustration of local descriptions, from the great national (but almost unintelligible) record known as Domesday Book; but Mr. Munford has done more in the case of his own county, for he supplies a complete epitome of the part of the survey relating to Norfolk, giving not only the topographical and statistical facts, but also a great deal that is instructive as to the manners and condition of the people, the state of the churches and other public edifices, the mode of cultivation and land tenure, together with a variety of points of interest to the ecclesiologist and antiquary."—BURY POST.

NARES' (Archdeacon) A Glossary, or Collection of Words, Phrases, Customs, Proverbs, &c., illustrating the Works of English Authors, particularly Shakespeare and his Contemporaries. A New Edition, with considerable Additions, both of Words and Examples. By JAMES O. HALLIWELL, F.R.S., and THOMAS WRIGHT, M.A., F.S.A. 2 thick vols, 8vo, cloth. £1. 1s

The Glossary of Archdeacon Nares is by far the best and most useful work we possess for explaining and illustrating the obsolete language and the customs and manners of the 16th and 17th Centuries, and it is quite indispensable for the readers of the literature of the Elizabethan period. The additional words and examples are distinguished from those in the original text by a † prefixed to each. The work contains between FIVE and SIX THOUSAND additional examples, the result of original research, not merely supplementary to Nares, but to all other compilations of the kind.

NASH'S (D. W., Member of the Royal Society of Literature) Taliesin, or, the Bards and Druids of Britain. A Translation of the Remains of the earliest Welsh Bards, and an examination of the Bardic Mysteries. 8vo, cloth. 14s

NASH'S (D. W.) The Pharaoh of the Exodus. An Examination of the Modern Systems of Egyptian Chronology. 8vo, with frontispiece of the Egyptian Calendar, from the ceiling of the Ramasseum, at Thebes, cloth. 12s

NAVAL ARCHITECTURE, Elements of Naval Architecture, being a Translation of the Third Part of Clairbois's "Traite Elementaire de la Construction des Vaisseaux." By J. N. STRANGE, Commander, R.N. 8vo, with five large folding plates, cloth. 5s

— Lectures on Naval Architecture, being the Substance of those delivered at the United Service Institution. By E. GARDINER FISHBOURNE, Commander, R. N. 8vo, plates, cloth. 5s 6d

Both these works are published in illustration of the "Wave System."

NETHERCLIFF'S (F. G.) Hand-Book to Autographs, being a Ready Guide to the Handwriting of Distinguished Men and Women of Every Nation, designed for the Use of Literary Men, Autograph Collectors, and others. Containing 700 Specimens, with a Biographical Index by R. Sims, of the British Museum. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges. 10s 6d (original price 15s)

— The Same. PRINTED ONLY ON ONE SIDE. 8vo, cloth extra. £1. 1s

The specimens contain two or three lines each besides the signature, so that to the historian such a work will recommend itself as enabling him to test the genuineness of the document he consults, whilst the judgment of the autograph collector may be similarly assisted, and his pecuniary resources economized by a judicious use of the Manual. To the bookworm, whose name is Legion, we would merely observe, that daily experience teaches us the great value and interest attached to books containing Marginal Notes and Memoranda, when traced to be from the pens of eminent persons.

NEWTON (William) A Display of Heraldry. 8vo, many hundred engravings of Shields, illustrating the Arms of English Families, cloth. 14s

NEWTON (William) London in the Olden Time, being a Topographical and Historical Memoir of London, Westminster and Southwark; accompanying a Pictorial Map of the City and Suburbs, as they existed in the reign of Henry VIII., before the Dissolution of the Monasteries; compiled from Authentic Documents. Folio, with the coloured map, 4 feet 6 inches by 3 feet 3 inches, mounted on linen, and folded into the volume, leather back, cloth sides, £1. 1s (original price £1. 11s 6d)

NORFOLK'S (E. E.) Gleanings in Graveyards: a Collection of Curious Epitaphs. Third Edition, revised and enlarged, fcap. 8vo, cloth. 3s

NUMISMATIC Chronicle and Journal of the Numismatic Society. NEW SERIES, Edited by W. S. W. VAUX, JOHN EVANS, and F. W. MADDEN. Nos. 1 to 24, Published Quarterly. 5s per Number.

This is the only repertory of Numismatic intelligence ever published in England. It contains papers on coins and medals, of all ages and countries, by the first Numismatists of the day, both English and Foreign.

Odd parts may be had to complete a few of this and the former series in 20 vols.

OLD BALLADS.—Catalogue of a unique Collection of 400 Ancient English Broadside Ballads, printed entirely in the Black letter, lately on sale by J. RUSSELL SMITH. With Notes of their Tunes, and Imprints. Post 8vo, a handsome volume, printed by Whittingham, in the old style, half bound. 5s

— A Copy on thick paper, without the prices to each, and a different title-page, only 10 copies so printed. 10s 6d

PARISH'S (Sir Woodbine, many years Charge d'Affairs at Buenos Ayres) Buenos Ayres, and the Provinces of the Rio de la Plata, from their Discovery and Conquest by the Spaniards to the Establishment of their Political Independence; with some Account of their Present State, Appendix of Historical Documents, Natural History, &c. Thick 8vo, Second Edition, plates and woodcuts, also a valuable map by Arrowsmith, cloth. 10s 6d (original price 14s)

"Among the contributions to the geography of the South American Continent, the work of our Vice-President, Sir Woodbine Parish, holds a very important place. Professing to be a second edition of a former book, it is, in reality, almost a new work, from the great quantity of fresh matter it contains on the geography, statistics, natural history, and geology of this portion of the world." —President of the Royal Geographical Society's Address.

PATERSON'S (Jas.) Histories of the Counties of Ayr and Wigton. Post 8vo, vol I. KYLE, in two parts, cloth. £1. 1s

PILGRIMAGES to St. Mary of Walsingham and St. Thomas of Canterbury. By DESIDERIUS ERASMUS. Newly Translated. With the Colloquy of Rash Vows, by the same Author, and his Characters of Archbishop Warham and Dean Colet, with Notes by J. GOUGH NICHOLS. Post 8vo, engravings, cloth. 3s 6d (original price 6s)

PIOZZI, Love Letters of Mrs. Piozzi (formerly Mrs. Thrale, the friend of Dr. Johnson), written when she was eighty, to the handsome actor, William Augustus Conway, aged Twenty-seven. 8vo, sewed. 2s

"—written at three, four, and five o'clock (in the morning) by an octogenary pen; a heart (as Mrs. Lee says) twenty-six years old, and as H. L. P. feels it to be, all your own."—Letter V., 3rd Feb., 1820.

"This is one of the most extraordinary collections of love epistles we have chanced to meet with, and the well-known literary reputation of the lady—the Mrs. Thrale, of Dr. Johnson and Miss Burney celebrity—considerably enhances their interest. The letters themselves it is not easy to characterise; nor shall we venture to decide whether they more bespeak the drivelling of dotage, or the folly of love; in either case they present human nature to us under a new aspect, and furnish one of those riddles which nothing yet dreamt of in our philosophy can satisfactorily solve."—Polytechnic Review.

POPE.—Facts and Conjectures on the Descent and Family Connections of Pope, the Poet. By the REV. JOSEPH HUNTER. Post 8vo. 2s

POSTE (Beale) Vindication of the "Celtic Inscriptions on Gaulish and British Coins." 8vo, plates, and cuts, cloth. 1s

POSTE (Rev. Beale, M.A.) Britannic Researches; or, New Facts and Rectifications of Ancient British History. 8vo (pp. 448), with engravings, cloth. 15s

"The author of this volume may justly claim credit for considerable learning, great industry, and, above all, strong faith in the interest and importance of his subject. . . . On various points he has given us additional information, and afforded us new views, for which we are bound to thank him. The body of the book is followed by a very complete index, so as to render reference to any part of it easy: this was the more necessary, on account of the multifariousness of the topics treated, the variety of persons mentioned, and the many works quoted."—Athenaeum, Oct. 8, 1853.

"The Rev. Beale Poste has long been known to antiquaries as one of the best read of all those who have elucidated the earliest annals of this country. He is a practical man, has investigated for himself monuments and manuscripts, and we have in the above-named volume the fruits of many years' patient study. The objects which will occupy the attention of the reader are—1. The political position of the principal British powers before the Roman conquest—under the Roman dominion, and struggling unsuccessfully against the Anglo-Saxon race; 2. The Geography of Ancient Britain; 3. An investigation of the Ancient British Historians, Gildas and Neunius, and the more obscure British chroniclers; 4. The ancient stone monuments of the Celtic period; and, lastly, some curious and interesting notices of the early British Church. Mr. Poste has not touched on subjects which have received much attention from others, save in cases where he had something new to offer, and the volume must be regarded therefore, as an entirely new collection of discoveries and deductions tending to throw light on the darkest, as well as the earliest, portion of our national history."—Atlas.

POSTE (Rev. Beale) Britannia Antiqua, or Ancient Britain brought within the Limits of Authentic History. 8vo, pp. 386, map, cloth. 14s

A Sequel to the foregoing work.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE ANGLIA CHRISTIANA SOCIETY.

GIRALDUS Cambrensis, De Instructione Principum, with a Preface, Chronological Abstract and Marginal Notes (in English), by the Rev. J. S. BREWER. 8vo, boards. 5s 1846

Now first printed from the Manuscript in the Cottonian Library, particularly illustrating the Reign of Henry II. Among our earlier chroniclers, there is not a more lively writer than Giraldus de Barri.

CHRONICON Monasterii de Bello, with a Preface, Chronological Abstract, and Marginal Notes (in English), by the Editor. 8vo, boards. 5s 1846

A very curious History of Battle Abbey, in Sussex, by one of the Monks. Printed from a MS. in the Cottonian Library.

LIBER ELIENSIS, ad fidem Codicum Variorum. Vol 1 (all printed), with English Preface and Notes, by the Rev. D. Stewart, of the College, Ely. 8vo, boards. 5s 1843

An important chronicle of the early transactions connected with the Monastery of Ely, supposed to have been compiled by Richard the Monk, between 1108 and 1131.

The above three volumes are all the Society printed. They are well worthy of being placed on the same shelf with the Camden, Oxton, Surtees, and Chetham Societies' publications. From the limited number of members of the Society, the books are little known. J. R. Smith having become the proprietor of the few remaining copies, recommends an early purchase.

JOHN NOAKES and MARY STYLES, a Poem, exhibiting some of the most striking lingual localisms peculiar to Essex, with a Glossary. By CHARLES CLARK, Esq., of Great Totham Hall, Essex. Post 8vo, cloth. 2s.

NATHAN HOGG'S Letters and Poems in the Devonshire Dialect. The fifth Edition, with additions. Post 8vo. Coloured wrapper. 1s.

"These letters, which have achieved considerable popularity, evince an extensive acquaintance with the vernacular of the county and its idioms and phrases, while the continuous flow of wit and humour throughout cannot fail to operate forcibly upon the risible faculties of the reader. In the Witch story Nathan has excelled himself, and it is to be hoped we have not seen his last effort in this branch of local English literature. The superstitions of Jan Vaggis and Jan Plant are most graphically and amusingly portrayed, and the various incidents whereby the influence of the 'Evil Eye' is sought to be counteracted, are at once ludicrous and irresistible."—Plymouth Mail.

NATHAN HOGG'S New Series of Poems in the Devonshire Dialect, including the Witch Story of Mucksey Lane, and the Kenton Ghost. Dedicated by Permission to his Highness Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte. Post 8vo, 4th edition enlarged, coloured wrapper. 1s

A GLOSSARY of Words used in Teesdale, in the County of Durham. Post 8vo, cloth. 2s 6d (original price, 6s)

"Contains about two thousand words . . . It is believed the first and only collection of words and phrases peculiar to this district, and we hail it therefore as a valuable contribution to the history of language and literature . . . the author has evidently brought to bear an extensive personal acquaintance with the common language"—Darlington Times

POEMS of Rural Life in the Dorset Dialect. By the Rev. WILLIAM BARNES, of Came Rectory, Dorchester. First Collection. Fcp. 8vo, FOURTH EDITION, cloth. 5s.

— Second Collection. Fcp. 8vo. SECOND EDITION, cloth. 5s.

— Third Collection. Fcp. 8vo, cloth. 4s 6d.

"The author is a genuine poet, and it is delightful to catch the pure breath of song in verses which assert themselves only as the modest vehicle of rare words and Saxon inflections. We have no intention of setting up the Dorset patois against the more extended provincialism of Scotland, still less of comparing the Dorsetshire poet with the Scotch; yet we feel sure that these poems would have delighted the heart of Burns, that many of them are not unworthy of him, and that (at any rate) his best productions cannot express a more cordial sympathy with external nature, or a more loving interest in human joys and sorrows"—Literary Gazette.

LEICESTERSHIRE Words, Phrases, and Proverbs. By A. B. EVANS, D.D., Head Master of Market Bosworth Grammar School. 12mo, cloth. 5s.

A GLOSSARY of the Provincialisms of the County of Sussex. By W. DURRANT COOPER, F.S.A. Post 8vo, second edition, enlarged, cloth. 3s 6d.

- A GLOSSARY of Northamptonshire Words and Phrases, with Examples of their Colloquial Use, with illustrations from various Authors, to which are added the Customs of the County. By Miss A. E. BAKER. 2 vols, post 8vo, cloth. 16s (original price £1. 4s)

"We are under great obligations to the lady, sister to the local historian of Northamptonshire, who has occupied her time in producing this very capital Glossary of Northamptonshire provincialisms"—Examiner.

"The provincial dialects of England contain and preserve the elements and rudiments of our compound tongue. In Miss Baker's admirable 'Northamptonshire Glossary,' we have rather a repertory of archaisms than vulgarisms. But it is much more than a vocabulary; it preserves not only dialectical peculiarities, but odd and disappearing customs; and there is hardly a page in it which does not throw light on some obscurity in our writers, or recall old habits and practices."—Christian Remembrancer, Quarterly Review.

- WESTMORELAND and Cumberland.—Dialogues, Poems, Songs, and Ballads, by various Writers, in the Westmoreland and Cumberland Dialects, now first collected, to which is added a Copious Glossary of Words peculiar to those Counties. Post 8vo, (pp. 408), cloth. 9s.

- A GLOSSARY of Provincial Words in use in Wiltshire, showing their Derivation in numerous instances, from the Language of the Anglo Saxons. By JOHN YONGE AKERMAN, Esq., F.S.A. 12mo, cloth. 3s

- THE DIALECT of Leeds and its Neighbourhood, illustrated by Conversations and Tales of Common Life, etc., to which are added a Copious Glossary, Notices of the various Antiquities, Manners, and Customs, and General Folk-lore of the District. Thick 12mo, pp. 458, cloth. 6s

This is undoubtedly the best work hitherto published on the dialects of Yorkshire in general, and of Leeds in particular. The author, we believe one of our fellow townsmen—for his introductory remarks are dated 'Leeds, March, 1861'—has used not only great industry, but much keen observation, and has produced a book which will everywhere be received as a valuable addition to the archaeological literature of England.—Leeds Intelligencer.

- A LIST of Provincial Words in Use in Wakefield, Yorkshire, with Explanations, including a few descriptions and localities. By W. S. BANKS. 12mo. 1s 6d

- THE Yorkshire Dialect, exemplified in various Dialogues, Tales, and Songs, applicable to the County, with a Glossary. Post 8vo. 1s.

- A GLOSSARY of Yorkshire Words and Phrases, collected in Whitby and its Neighbourhood, with examples of their colloquial use and allusions to local Customs and Traditions. By an INHABITANT. 12mo, cloth. 3s 6d

- A GLOSSARY, with some Pieces of Verse of the Old Dialect of the English Colony in the Baronies of Forth and Bargo, Co. Wexford, Ireland. Formerly collected by JACOB POOLE, of Growton, now edited with Notes and Introduction by the REV. W. BARNES, Author of the Dorset Poems and Glossary. Fcap. 8vo, cloth. 4s 6d

"Dr. Rimbault has been at some pains to collect the words of the songs which used to delight the rustics of former times."—Atlas.

RIMBAULT (Dr. E. F.) Bibliotheca Madrigaliana.—A Bibliographical Account of the Musical and Poetical Works published in England during the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, under the Titles of Madrigals, Ballets, Ayres, Canzonets, &c., &c. 8vo, cloth. 5s

It records a class of books left undescribed by Ames, Herbert, and Dibdin, and furnishes a most valuable Catalogue of Lyrical Poetry of the age to which it refers.

ROBERTS' (George, of Lyme Regis)—Life, Progresses, and Rebellion of James, Duke of Monmouth, &c., to his Capture and Execution, with a full account of the "Bloody Assize," under Judge Jefferies, and Copious Biographical Notices. 2 vols, post 8vo, plates and cuts, cloth, 7s 6d (original price, £1. 4s.)

Two very interesting volumes, particularly so to those connected with the West of England. Quoted for facts by Lord Macaulay.

ROBERTS' (George) The Social History of the People of the Southern Counties of England in Past Centuries, illustrated in regard to their Habits, Municipal Bye-laws, Civil Progress, &c. Thick 8vo, cloth. 7s 6d (original price, 16s)

An interesting volume on old English manners and customs, mode of travelling, punishments, witchcraft, gipsies, pirates, stage-players, pilgrimages, prices of labour and provisions, the clothing trade of the West of England, &c., &c., compiled chiefly from original materials, as the archives of Lyme-Regis and Weymouth, family papers, church registers, &c. Dedicated to Lord Macaulay.

ROBIN HOOD.—The Great Hero of the Ancient Minstrelsy of England, "Robin Hood," his Period, real Character, &c., investigated, and perhaps ascertained. By the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. Post 8vo. 2s 6d.

ROBINSON (J. B., of Derby)—Derbyshire Gatherings; a Fund of Delight for the Antiquary, the Historian, the Topographer, and Biographer, and General Reader. A handsome 4to, with engravings, extra cloth, gilt edges. £1. 5s

ROMAN COINS.—Records of Roman History, from Cnæus Pompeius to Tiberius Constantinus, as exhibited on the Roman Coins, Collected by Francis Hobler, formerly Secretary to the Numismatic Society of London. 2 vols, royal 4to, frontispiece and numerous engravings, in cloth. £1. 1s (original price £2. 2s, only 250 printed).

"A work calculated not only to interest the professed numismatist, but also to instruct the classical student and the historian. The unpublished Coins are rather numerous, especially when we consider how many works have been printed on the Roman series, and how much it has been studied. The value of the work is much enhanced by the illustrations, executed by Mr. Farholt, with the peculiar spirit and fidelity which indicate his experienced hand."—C. Roach Smith's Collectanea Antiqua.

SACRED MUSIC.—By the Rev. W. Sloane Evans, M.A. Royal 8vo, third edition, sewed. 1s 6d (original price, 6s)

Consisting of Psalm Tunes, Sanctusses, Kyrie-Eleisons, &c., &c., and fifty-four Single and Double Chants (Major, Changeable, and Minor).

SALVERTE'S (Eusebius) History of the Names of Men, Nations, and Places, in their Connection with the Progress of Civilization. Translated by the Rev. L. H. Mordaque, M.A., Oxon. 2 vols, 8vo, cloth. £1. 4s

"Notre nom propre c'est nous-mêmes."

"Nomina si nescis perit cognitio rerum."

"Full of learning, well written, and well translated."—Daily News.

"These two volumes are filled with a minute and philosophical enquiry into the origin of names of all sorts among all nations, and show profound scholarship and patient skill in wide and elaborate research. Much of the work is, necessarily, too profound for general readers—particularly the appendices to the second volume—but the larger part of the enquiry is so curious and interesting that any ordinary reader will fully appreciate and profit by the researches."—Birmingham Journal.

SANDYS' (W., F.S.A.)—Christmastide, its History, Festivities, and Carols (with their music). In a handsome vol. 8vo, illustrated with 20 engravings after the designs of F. Stephanoff, extra cloth, gilt edges. 5s (original price 14s)

"Its title vouches that Christmastide is germane to the time. Mr. Sandys has brought together, in an octavo of some 300 pages, a great deal of often interesting information beyond the stale gossip about "Christmas in the olden time," and the threadbare make-believes of jollity and geniality which furnish forth most books on the subject. His carols, too, which include some in old French and Provençal, are selected from numerous sources, and comprise many of the less known and more worth knowing. His materials are presented with good feeling and mastery of his theme. On the whole the volume deserves, and should anticipate, a welcome."—Spectator.

SANDYS (W.) and S. A. FORSTER.—History of the Violin and other Instruments played on with a Bow, from the Earliest Times to the Present, also an Account of the Principal Makers, English and Foreign. Thick 8vo, pp. 408, with many engravings, cloth. 14s SANDY'S (Charles, of Canterbury) Consuetudes Kancie. A History of Gavelkind, and other remarkable Customs, in the County of Kent. 8vo, illustrated with facsimiles, a very handsome volume, cloth. 15s.

SANDYS (Charles) Critical Dissertation on Professor Willis's "Architectural History of Canterbury Cathedral." 8vo. 2s 6d

"Written in no quarrelsome or captious spirit; the highest compliment is paid to Professor Willis where it is due. But the author has made out a clear case, in some very important instances, of inaccuracies that have led the learned Professor into the construction of serious errors throughout. It may be considered as an indispensable companion to his volume, containing a great deal of extra information of a very curious kind."—Art-Union.

SAULL (W. D.) On the Connection between Astronomical and Geological Phenomena, addressed to the Geologists of Europe and America. 8vo, diagrams, sewed. 2s

SCRASE FAMILY.—Genealogical Memoir of the Family of Scrase, of Sussex. By M. A. LOWER. 8vo. 1s 6d

SHAKESPERIANA.

A LIFE OF SHAKESPEARE, including many particulars respecting the Poet and his Family, never before published. By J. O. HALLIWELL, F.R.S., etc. 8vo, illustrated with 75 engravings on wood, most of which are of new objects from drawings by Fairholt, cloth. 15s. 1848

This work contains upwards of forty documents respecting Shakespeare and his family, never before published, besides numerous others, indirectly illustrating the Poet's biography. All the anecdotes and traditions concerning Shakespeare are here, for the first time, collected, and much new light is thrown on his personal history, by papers exhibiting him as selling Malt, Stone, &c. Of the seventy-six engravings which illustrate the volume, more than fifty have never before been engraved.

It is the only life of Shakespeare to be bought separately from his works.

NEW ILLUSTRATIONS of the Life, Studies, and Writings of Shakespeare. By the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. 2 vols, 8vo, cloth. 7s 6d (original price £1. 1s). 1845

Supplementary to all editions of the works of the Poet.

Part 2, price 8s., and Parts 3, 4, and 5 together, price 8s., may be had to complete copies.

SHAKESPEARE'S Versification, and its Apparent Irregularities Explained by Examples from Early and Late English Writers. By W. SIDNEY WALKER, Edited by WM. NANSON LETTSON. Foolscap 8vo, cloth. 6s. 1854

"The reader of Shakespeare would do well to make himself acquainted with this excellent little book previous to entering upon the study of the poet"—Mr. Singer, in the Preface to his New Edition of Shakespeare.

A CRITICAL Examination of the Text of Shakespeare; together with Notes on his Plays and Poems, by the late W. SIDNEY WALKER. Edited by W. Nanson Lettson. 3 vols, foolscap 8vo, cloth. 18s. 1860

"Very often we find ourselves differing from Mr. Walker on readings and interpretations, but we seldom differ from him without respect for his scholarship and criticism. His are not the wild guesses at truth which neither gods nor men have stomach to endure, but the suggestions of a trained intelligence and a chastened taste. Future editors and commentators will be bound to consult these volumes, and consider their suggestions"—Athenæum

"A valuable addition to our Philological Literature, the most valuable part being the remarks on contemporary literature, the mass of learning by which the exact meaning and condition of a word is sought to be established."—Literary Gazette.

"Mr. Walker's Works undoubtedly form altogether the most valuable body of verbal criticism that has yet appeared from an individual."—Mr. Dyce's Preface to Vol. I. of his Shakespeare, 1864.

NARES' (Archd.) Glossary, or Collection of Words, Phrases, Customs, Proverbs, etc., illustrating the Works of English Authors, particularly Shakespeare and his Contemporaries. A new edition, with Considerable Additions both of Words and Examples. By James O. Halliwell, F.R.S., and Thomas Wright, M.A., F.S.A. 2 thick vols, 8vo, cloth. £1. 1s. 1867

The Glossary of Archdeacon Nares is by far the best and most useful Work we possess for explaining and illustrating the obsolete language, and the customs and manners of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, and it is quite indispensable for the readers of the literature of the Elizabethan period. The additional words and examples are distinguished from those of the original text by a † prefixed to each. The work contains between five and six thousand additional examples, the result of original research, not merely supplementary to Nares, but to all other compilations of the kind.

"Lord Palmerston was tolerably well up in the chief Latin and English Classics; but he entertained one of the most extraordinary paradoxes touching the greatest of them that was ever broached by a man of his intellectual calibre. He maintained that the Plays of Shakespeare were really written by Bacon, who passed them off under the name of an actor, for fear of compromising his professional prospects and philosophic gravity. Only last year, when this subject was discussed at Broadlands, Lord Palmerston suddenly left the room, and speedily returned with a small volume of dramatic criticisms (Mr. Smith's book) in which the same theory was supported by supposed analogies of thought and expression. 'There,' said he, 'read that, and you will come over to my opinion.'"—Fraser's Mag Nov. 1865.

- "On this subject of Shakespeare in Germany, Mr. W. J. Thoms has reprinted a paper read some years ago before the Society of Antiquaries, together with two other 'Notelets' on the Poet—'The Folk Lore of Shakespeare,' from the ATHENÆUM, and 'Was Shakespeare a Soldier?' from NOTES AND QUERIES. Not the least of Mr. Thoms's many services to English literature is the invention of that admirable word folk lore, which appeared for the first time in these columns only a few years ago, and has already become a domestic term in every corner of the world. His illustration of Shakespeare's knowledge of this little world of fairy dreams and legends is a perfect bit of criticism. He answers the query as to Shakespeare's having seen martial service in the affirmative; and therein we think his argument sound, his conclusion right. These 'Notelets' were very well worthy of being collected into a book."—Athenæum.

SIMS (Richard, of the Dept. of MSS. in the British Museum) A Manual for the Genealogist, Topographer, Antiquary, and Legal Professor, consisting of Descriptions of Public Records, Parochial and other Registers, Wills, County and Family Histories, Heraldic Collections in Public Libraries, &c. 8vo, SECOND EDITION, pp. 540, cloth. 15s

This work will be found indispensable by those engaged in the study of Family History and Heraldry, and by the compiler of County and Local History, the Antiquary and the Lawyer. In it the Public and other Records, most likely to afford information to genealogical inquirers, are fully described, and their places of present deposit indicated. Such Records are—The Domesday Books—Monastic Records—Cartæ Antiquæ—Liber Niger—Liber Rubens—Testa de Nevil—Placita in various Courts—Charter Rolls—Close Rolls—Coronation Rolls—Coroners' Rolls—Escheat Rolls—Fine Rolls—French, Gascon, and Norman Rolls—Hundred Rolls—Liberate Rolls—Memoranda Rolls—Oblata and other Rolls—Inquisitiones Post Mortem—Inquisitiones ad quod Damnum—Fines and Recoveries—Sign Manuals and Signet Bills—Privy Seals—Forfeitures, Pardons, and Attainders—Parliamentary Records—County Palatine Records—Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Records—also Wills—Parochial and other Registers—Registers of Universities and Public Schools—Heraldic Collections—Records of Clergymen, Lawyers, Surgeons, Soldiers, Sailors, &c., &c.

The whole accompanied by valuable Lists of Printed Works and Manuscripts in various Libraries, namely:—at the British Museum—The Bodleian, Ashmolean, and other Libraries at Oxford—The Public Library, and that of Caius College, Cambridge—The Colleges of Arms in London and Dublin—The Libraries of Lincoln's Inn, and of the Middle and Inner Temple—at Chetham College, Manchester; and in other repositories too numerous to mention.

The more important of these Lists are those of Monastic Cartularies—Extracts from Plea and other Rolls—Escheats—Inquisitions, &c.—Tenants in Capite—Recusants—Subsidies—Crown Lands—Wills—Parochial and other Registers—Heralds' Visitations—Royal and Noble Genealogies—Peerages, Baronetages, Knightages—Pedigrees of Gentry—County and Family Histories—Monumental Inscriptions—Coats of Arms—American Genealogies—Lists of Gentry—Members of Parliament—Freeholds—Officers of State—Justices of Peace—Mayors, Sheriffs, &c.—Collegians, Church Dignitaries—Lawyers—The Medical Profession—Soldiers—Sailors, etc.

To these is added an "Appendix," containing an Account of the Public Record Offices and Libraries mentioned in the work, the mode of obtaining admission, hours of attendance, fees for searching, copying, &c. Table of the Regnal Years of English Sovereigns; Tables of Dates used in Ancient Records, &c.

SIMS (Richard) Handbook to the Library of the British Museum, containing a brief History of its Formation, and of the various Collections of which it is composed, Descriptions of the Catalogues in present use, Classed Lists of the Manuscripts, etc., and a variety of Information indispensable for Literary Men, with some Account of the principal Public Libraries in London. Sm. 8vo (pp. 428) with map and plan, cloth. 2s 6d

It will be found a very useful work to every literary person or public institution in all parts of the world.

"A little Handbook of the Library has been published, which I think will be most useful to the public."—Lord Seymour's Reply in the H. of Commons. July, 1854.

"I am much pleased with your book, and find in it abundance of information which I wanted."—Letter from Albert Way, Esq., F.S.A., Editor of the "Promptorium Parvulorum," &c.

"I take this opportunity of telling you how much I like your nice little 'Handbook to the Library of the British Museum,' which I sincerely hope may have the success which it deserves."—Letter from Thos. Wright, Esq., F.S.A., Author of the 'Biographia Britannica Literaria,' &c.

"Mr. Sims's 'Handbook to the Library of the British Museum' is a very comprehensive and instructive volume. I venture to predict for it a wide circulation."—Mr. Bolton Corney, in "Notes and Queries," No. 213.

SURREY HILLS.—A Guide to the Caterham Railway and its Vicinity. Post 8vo, 2nd and revised edition, with a map, sewed. 6d

Thousands of tourists and pleasure-seekers go hundreds of miles for beautiful scenery without perhaps finding a country of more varied and interesting character than that to be met with in the Caterham Valley, and within twenty miles of the metropolis.

SURTEES (Rev. Scott. F., of Sprotburgh, Yorkshire) Waifs and Strays of North Humber History. Post 8vo, 3 plates, cloth. 3s 6d

SURTEES (Rev. Scott F.) Julius Caesar, Did he Cross the Channel (into Kent)? Post 8vo, cloth. 1s 6d

"In giving an answer in the negative to the above question, we ask for a fair and dispassionate hearing, and in order to avoid circumlocution pass at once our Rubicon, and propound as capable of all proof the following historical heresy, viz., that Caesar never set foot at Boulogne or Calais, never crossed the Channel, or set eyes on Deal or Dover, but that he sailed from the mouths of the Rhine or Scheldt, and landed in Norfolk on both his expeditions."—AUTHOR.

TESTAMENT (The New) translated from Griesbach's Text, by SAMUEL SHARPE, Author of the History of Egypt, &c. 5th edition. 12mo, pp. 412, cloth. 1s 6d

The aim of the translator has been to give the meaning and idiom of the Greek as far as possible in English words. The book is printed in paragraphs (the verses of the authorised version are numbered in the margins), speeches by inverted commas, and the quotations from the "Old Testament" in italics, those passages which seem to be poetry in a smaller type. It is entirely free from any motive to enforce doctrinal points. Five large impressions of the volume sufficiently test its value.

We cordially recommend this edition of the New Testament to our readers and contributors.—British Controversialist

Upon the whole, we must admit that his is the most correct English Version in existence, either of the whole or of any portion of the New Testament.—The Ecclesiastic, and repeated by the English Churchman.

TESTAMENT (Old).—The Hebrew Scriptures, translated by SAMUEL SHARPE, being a revision of the authorized English Old Testament. 3 vols, fcap. 8vo, cloth, red edges. 7s 6d

"In the following Revision of the Authorized Version of the Old Testament, the aim of the Translator has been to shew in the Text, by greater exactness, those peculiarities which others have been content to point out in Notes and Commentaries. He has translated from Van der Hooght's edition of the Hebrew Bible, printed in Amsterdam in 1705; except when, in a few cases, he has followed some of the various readings so industriously collected by Dr. Kennicott."—Preface. A Prospectus may be had.

TONSTALL (Cuthbert, Bishop of Durham) Sermon preached on Palm Sunday, 1539, before Henry VIII.; reprinted verbatim from the rare edition by Berthelet, in 1539. 12mo. 1s 6d.

An exceedingly interesting Sermon, at the commencement of the Reformation; Strype in his "Memoials," has made large extracts from it.

TORRENT OF PORTUGAL; an English Metrical Romance. Now first published, from an unique MS. of the XVth Century, preserved in the Chetham Library at Manchester. Edited by J. O. HALLIWELL, &c. Post 8vo, cloth, uniform with Ritson, Weber, and Ellis's publications, cloth. 5s.

"This is a valuable and interesting addition to our list of early English metrical romances, and an indispensable companion to the collections of Ritson, Weber, and Ellis,"—Literary Gazette.

TOPOGRAPHER (The) and Genealogist. Edited by J. G. NICHOLS. 3 vols. 8vo, cloth. £1. 5s (pub £3. 3s)

This extremely valuable work forms a sequel to the "Collectanea Topographica Genealogica," and the intrinsic value and originality of the materials comprised therein, will entitle it not only to preservation, but to frequent reference.

TOWNEND'S (William) The Descendants of the Stuarts. An Unchronicled Page in England's History. 8vo, portraits and folding pedigrees, SECOND EDITION, WITH ADDITIONS, half morocco. 5s (original price 10s)

This volume contains a most minute, precise, and valuable history of the Descendants of the Stuart Family. Neither of our Historians from Hume to Macaulay give even the more prominent facts in connection with many branches of the House of Stuart.

"This is a really interesting contribution to what we may term the private records of history. . . . What Mr. Townend has done is full of curious information. His Genealogical tables shew all the ramifications which spring out of the matrimonial alliances of the descendants of the Stuarts, and very curious possibilities some of these indicate. . . . We promise our readers that this volume contains much that is worthy of perusal and recollection, as well as much that is suggestive."—Globe.

- Written in a scientific and popular manner, and printed and illustrated uniformly with the works of Bell, Yarrell, Forbes, Johnston, &c. Dedicated to the late Mr. Yarrell, who took great interest in the progress of the work. Mr. Vasey engraved many of the beautiful woodcuts in Mr. Yarrell's works.
- VASEY'S (George) Illustrations of Eating, displaying the Omnivorous Character of Man, and exhibiting the Natives of various Countries at Feeding-time. Fcap. 8vo, with woodcuts by the Author. 2s
- VERNON'S (E. J., B.A., Oxon) Guide to the Anglo-Saxon Tongue, on the Basis of Professor Rask's Grammar ; to which are added Reading Lessons in Verse and Prose, with Notes, for the Use of Learners. 12mo, cloth. 5s

"Mr. Vernon has, we think, acted wisely in taking Rask for his model ; but let no one suppose from the title that the book is merely a compilation from the work of that philologist. The accidence is abridged from Rask, with constant revision, correction, and modification ; but the syntax, a most important portion of the book, is original, and is compiled with great care and skill ; and the latter half of the volume consists of a well-chosen selection of extracts from Anglo-Saxon writers, in prose and in verse, for the practice of the student, who will find great assistance in reading them from the grammatical notes with which they are accompanied, and from the glossary which follows them. This volume, well studied, will enable anyone to read with ease the generally of Anglo-Saxon writers ; and its cheapness places it within the reach of every class. It has our hearty recommendation."—Literary Gazette.

- VICARS' (John) England's Worthies, under whom all the Civil and Bloody Warres, since Anno 1642 to Anno 1647, are related. Royal 12mo, reprinted in the old style (similar to Lady Willoughby's Diary), with copies of the 18 rare portraits after Hollar, etc., half morocco. 5s

An early application is necessary, as but few copies remain on sale.

WILLMOTT (Robert Aris, some time Incumbent of Bear Wood, Berks) A Journal of Summer Time in the Country. FOURTH EDITION; to which is added an Introductory Memoir by his Sister. Foolscap 8vo, elegantly printed by Whittingham, extra cloth. 5s

This 'Journal of Summer Time' is a genial gossip of literary matters under the various days of the month from May to August. It is full of anecdote, and full of interest; and is a sort of literary natural history, like that of Selbourne by good Gilbert White. The observations, the reading, the meditations of a well-trained, well-filled mind, give this volume its charm, and make it one which even the best-informed reader may wile away an hour with in recalling his own wanderings in the literary fields. The great glory of this book is that it is thoroughly natural. It does not aim at fine writing or sensational stories, but jots down from day to day such memoranda as a well-stored mind, familiar with the great treasures of our literature, would give forth in the quiet of a country parsonage, when summer smiled over the fields and woods, and a garden gave forth its pleasant sights and sounds—Birmingham Journal.

WORSAAE'S (J. J. A., of Copenhagen) Primeval Antiquities of Denmark, translated and applied to the illustration of similar remains in England, by W. J. Thoms, F.S.A. 8vo, many engravings, cloth. 4s 6d (original price 10s 6d)

There is no work in the English Language which gives the reader such a comprehensive and connected History of the Literature of these periods.

WRIGHT (Thomas) Wanderings of an Antiquary, chiefly upon the Traces of the Romans in Britain, many illustrations, post 8vo, cloth. 4s 6d (original price 8s 6d)

WRIGHT'S (Thomas) Saint Patrick's Purgatory, an Essay on the Legends of Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise, current during the Middle Ages. Post 8vo, cloth. 6s

"It must be observed that this is not a mere account of St. Patrick's Purgatory, but a complete history of the legends and superstitions relating to the subject, from the earliest times, rescued from old MSS. as well as from old printed books. Moreover, it embraces a singular chapter of literary history omitted by Warton and all former writers with whom we are acquainted: and we think we may add, that it forms the best introduction to Dante that has yet been published."—Literary Gazette

"This appears to be a curious and even amusing book on the singular subject of Purgatory, in which the idle and fearful dreams of superstition are shown to be first narrated as tales, and then applied as means of deducing the moral character of the age in which they prevailed."—Spectator

WRIGHT'S (Thomas) Anecdota Literaria, a Collection of Short Poems in English, Latin, and French, illustrative of the Literature and History of England in the XIIIth Century, and more especially of the Condition and Manners of the Different Classes of Society. 8vo, cloth, only 250 copies printed. 5s

YORKSHIRE.—The History of the Township of Meltham, near Huddersfield, by the late Rev. JOSEPH HUGHES, edited with addition by C. H. Post 8vo, cloth. 7s 6d

Several other books relating to Yorkshire, are interspersed through this Cata-

ADDENDA.

TWAMLEY'S (C.) Historical and Descriptive Account of Dudley Castle in Staffordshire. Post 8vo, cloth. 4s

SCOTT (Henry, Minister of Anstruther Wester). Fasti-Ecclesie Scoti-cance; the Succession of Ministers to the Parish Churches of Scotland, from the Reformation, A.D. 1560, to the present time. Part I. Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. 4to, pp. 400. cl. £1. 10s To be completed in 3 parts—the second is now in the Printer's hands.

"The design of the present work is to present a comprehensive account of the Succession of Ministers of the Church of Scotland, since the period of the Reformation. An attempt is made to give some additional interest by furnishing incidental notices of their lives, writings, and families, which may prove useful to the Biographer, the Genealogist, and the Historian.

"The sources from which the work has been compiled are the various records of Kirk Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, together with the Books of Assignations, Presentations to Benefices, and the Commissariat Registers of Confirmed Testaments. From these authentic sources the information here collected will, it is believed, be found as accurate as the utmost care can render it. Having been commenced at an early period of life, this work has been prosecuted during all the time that could be spared from professional engagements for a period of nearly fifty years.

"Some idea of the labour and continuous research involved in preparing the work may be formed, when the Author states, that he has visited all the Presbyteries in the Church, and about seven hundred and sixty different Parishes, for the purpose of examining the existing records. In this way he has had an opportunity of searching eight hundred and sixty volumes of Presbytery, and one hundred volumes of Synod Records, besides those of the General Assembly, along with the early Registers of Assignations and Presentations to Benefices, and about four hundred and thirty volumes of the Testament Registers in the different Commissariats."—Extract from Preface.

RECORDS of the Convention of the Royal Burghs of Scotland, with extracts from other Records relating to the affairs of the Burghs of Scotland, 1295-1597, edited by J. D. MARWICK. 4to, pp. 600, cloth, only 150 printed for sale. £1. 10s

TRANSACTIONS of the LOGGERVILLE LITERARY SOCIETY. 8vo, pp. 174, with many humorous cuts, extra cloth gilt edges. 7s 6d

A few copies of this privately printed volume on sale, of which the Morning Post says: "All the drawings are capital—full of genuine fun; and the biographical sketch of the president, Lumpkin Queer, Esq., is in the style of the introductory chapter to 'Martin Chuzzlewit,' but a much cleverer performance. Still better is the president's address, the grave and plausible absurdity of which is almost painfully laughable. A paper on 'Some Peculiarities of the French Language' is, with its delightful literal translation of 'How doth the little busy bee,' (the irrepressible insect being rendered L'abrilie peu industrieuse,) one of the best burlesques we have ever read. A 'Retrospective Review of Juvenile Literature' is a perfect gem of fun and ingenuity. The book is a complete success."

The Athenæum says: "The book is not one to be read through steadily, but it will furnish a good deal of mirth if dipped into during leisure half hours. Of the papers, 'Some Observations on Ignorance,' 'A Tour in Cornwall,' and the 'Notes to Dandados, a Tragedy,' are the best, the notes in this case being superior to the dramatic extravaganza which they illustrate."
